Area Synagogues Vandals' Targets

By WALTER S. CLARK JR.

A three-prong investigation is in progress in the Town of Wawarsing to determine if anti-Semitism was involved in any degree in recent burglaries at the Kerhonkson Synagogue and Jewish Center, or incidents at two camps at Spring Glen and Ulster Heights.

The district attorney, State Police BCI at Ellenville and the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) are conducting the inquiries. The burglaries and incidents have created considerable concern and some unrest. There is indication of fear that similar acts might occur. Officers and members of the synagogue and Jewish Center are waiting, hoping that continued investigation by the BCI officers and close surveillance of property involved will bring a definite end to such acts, termed by some as vandalism.

One synagogue officer said if there are any more disturbances or break-ins at the Temple or Center, or incidents at area camps that cater to Jewish people, then it would be reason to suspect the acts are prompted by organized anti-Semitism.

Few persons feel that anti-Semitism to some extent was involved in the Synagogue burglaries and camp incidents, which resulted in the arrests of 14 young men on charges of unlawful assembly.

Opinions differ as to the extent of damage done by unidentified persons who entered the Synagogue and Center. Authorities contend that the damage, if any, was minor. Temple officials on the other hand claim the damage was extensive. They have photographs showing the condition inside the Temple after it was ransacked to support their claim.

A Town of Wawarsing official, who said he has resided in that community all of his life, said he hasn't known of anti-Semitism activities in that area. Others feel that the recent acts had some essence of anti-Semitism. But those interviewed by a Freeman reporter believe that, if that condition does exist, it only involves a small

October Target Date Set For College Dedication

An October target date has been set for the formal dedication of the Ulster County Community College at Stone Ridge. The exact date is dependent upon the availability of a prominent speaker who will take part in the formal dedication.

Plans presently being formed call for the dedication ceremonies to be held outdoors in front of the DeWitt Library Building but should the weather be bad the ceremonies will be held indoors. Closed circuit television in class rooms would make the ceremonies available to all those attending.

Many Matters

Dedication of the new Stone Ridge campus was one of the several matters discussed at a meeting of the board of trustees Tuesday night.

Another matter was that of transportation. In cooperation with the college officials the Eagle Bus Line is working out a schedule to give student transportation service to students of the Kingston-Ellenville area.

Plans are being discussed for several trips daily, including evenings, for transportation of students from the Ellenville and Kingston areas to the college. Trips will be arranged to provide student service in accordance with need. It has been proposed that some four or five trips be made if college schedules show need.

At the meeting of trustees Tuesday night, Dr. George B. Erbstein, president, discussed numerous problems incident to the opening of classes September 18.

Dr. Erbstein also gave a report on the progress of plans for Phase II. A meeting was scheduled for today at the Stone Ridge campus for discussion of tentative plans for Phase II with Architect Albert E. Milliken in attendance. At the meeting, plans for the first buildings of Phase II were on the agenda for discussion.

Extension Courses

Among tentative plans for next year which were discussed by the trustees was the possible scheduling of extension courses in Saugerties, Ellenville and Woodstock. Dr. Erbstein stated today that this plan was being considered and would be reviewed according to demand and requirements.

Evening classes will continue to be held at the East Chestnut Street, Kingston, college this fall and there is a good possibility that some day classes will have to be held in Kingston next year should enrollment warrant.

Until Phase II of the Stone Ridge college campus is completed and available, it is entirely possible that the Kingston facilities will have to continue in use. With an enrollment of some 900 this fall, and the Stone Ridge facility capable of accommodating about 600, schedules for classes have been so arranged that the student body can be accommodated.

However, should the enrollment increase, as present indications are, by next fall it may be necessary to use the Kingston facilities for some day classes pending completion of the Phase II at Stone Ridge.

Library Delayed

The first floor of the DeWitt Library building at Stone Ridge will be completed within a week or two but the addition of a mezzanine on the second level will delay completion of the library building. Presently the library is being maintained at the East Chestnut Street site. Dedication ceremonies in October will be open to the general public, affording an opportunity to inspect the new permanent campus of Ulster County's Community College.

In addition to the general publicity some 1,000 invitations will be sent out to state officials, college presidents and officers and local officials.

Other Business

Other business discussed by the college trustees Tuesday night included financial matters and staff and instructor problems.

While students will not report to the college until Sept. 18, officials and members of the staff will report after Labor Day in order to complete programs and be ready to begin classes by the mid-September date, Dr. Erbstein said.

The next meeting of the board of trustees will be held on September 26, it being the first meeting of the trustees to be held on campus.

British Diplomat Beaten By Chinese

By RODNEY PINDER

LONDON (AP) — Britain imposed tight restrictions on the movement of Chinese diplomats in this country Tuesday night in retaliation for the burning of its Peking mission and the beating of British staff members by rampaging Red Guards. But a break in diplomatic relations did not appear imminent.

The British government reacted with swift anger over the incident in which British charge d'affaires, Donald Hopson, and nine other mission staff members were pummeled and humiliated in front of a screaming mob.

Blame Mao

Britain charged that Mao Tse-tung's regime was behind the attack and linked it to Peking's campaign to harass British rule in the crown colony of Hong Kong.

Sources in Whitehall believed it unlikely, however, that the incident would prompt Britain to sever relations with China. One source said the Foreign Office "has learned not to react in pique." Another said the British will "sit tight."

The Foreign Office branded the attack "an outrageous and uncivilized act which would bring the Chinese government into disrepute throughout the world."

Summoning Chinese Charge d'Affaires Shen Ping, a Foreign Office official informed him that:

—All Chinese in Britain holding diplomatic or official passports must obtain exit visas from the Foreign Office before leaving Britain.

—All members of the Chinese diplomatic mission are restricted to travel within a radius of five miles from the center of London unless they give 48 hours notice.

—Permission to operate diplomatic radio transmissions by the Chinese mission is suspended until restrictions on the British diplomatic radio in Peking are lifted.

The demonstration got underway, the Foreign Office said, with an attempt to make Hopson and other British diplomats bow their heads and "admit their guilt."

A day-long demonstration by more than 10,000 Red Guards in front of the British mission's office building exploded into violence with the expiration of a Chinese ultimatum demanding that the British release Communist newsmen arrested in the Hong Kong and withdraw action against pro-Communist newspapers.

The demonstration got underway, the Foreign Office said, with an attempt to make Hopson and other British diplomats bow their heads and "admit their guilt."

The British Mission's radio went dead after the operator reported, "they're coming in."

The Foreign Office learned from other diplomats in Peking that the Red Guards smashed their way into the building, savagely beating diplomats and secretaries, and began throwing cans of flaming gasoline.

A Japanese report from Peking said Hopson and nine other staff members were beaten up as they fled from the burning building. The Kyodo News Agency's Peking correspondent said it was not known how seriously they were injured.

The Foreign Office said another embassy sent word to London the British staff and their families were safe in other foreign missions.

Red China supplies half the colony's food, and a Communist leader in Hong Kong threatened Tuesday that this would be stopped unless action against the pro-Communist papers and their employees and executives ended.

Johnson Again Moves For Israel-Arab Peace

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Johnson has written to King Faisal of Saudi Arabia to assure him Israeli troops will be withdrawn from areas they seized in the June war if the Arabs make "certain arrangements," the Beirut newspaper Al Hayat reported today.

In a dispatch from Washington, Al Hayat said "arrangements mentioned by Johnson" were left vague but the President hinted in the letter he meant his five-point program announced June 19.

Johnson called then for Arab recognition of Israel's statehood, justice for Arab refugees, the right of all shipping to use international waterways, limits on the wasteful and destructive arms race, and political independence and integrity for all.

Other press reports in Beirut said a trio of Arab leaders is expected to confer this weekend in the Lebanese capital. The reports said King Hussein of Jordan, due in Beirut tonight for a two-day state visit, would be joined Friday by President Abdel Rahman Aref of Iraq and both would confer with Lebanese President Charles Helou.

Mainly they will discuss preparations for the 13-nation Arab summit conference scheduled for Khartoum Aug. 29, the reports said.

Aref is now visiting Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, reportedly trying to meditate the Yemen civil war in which Egypt and Saudi Arabia are backing opposing sides. The Yemen war is considered one of the main stumbling blocks to the success of the Khartoum summit, called to seek unified policy toward the Israeli occupation of parts of Egypt, Jordan and Syria.

Sudanese Premier Mohammed Mahgoub arrived in Beirut Tuesday night. He made a side trip to Damascus today to confer with Syrian President Nouraddin Atassi and planned to leave for Cairo tonight to see Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

That means only a fraction of the 170,000 Arabs who have fled repatriation applications will be able to go home.

Uptown Bank Seeks Approval of Branch

The Kingston Savings Bank, 273 Wall Street, has filed an application with the State Banking Department and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation seeking consent to open a branch bank in the county. The application was filed several days ago and probably will not be acted upon until next month.

Notice has been sent to local banking houses informing them of the intention of the Kingston Savings Bank to open a branch, should state permission be granted.

It became known today that an option has been taken on the former "Bonanza" steak house property on Albany Avenue Extension, as a possible site for the county branch when consent is granted.

The "Bonanza," a new modern structure, opened some time ago as a steak house but closed shortly after. Since the place closed it has been vacant.

Parking for 51 cars would be provided on the 127 by 240 foot lot, one and eight tenths miles north of Kingston, approximately across Route 9W from the Caldor-Waibaum shopping center and immediately south of the proposed Kingston Mall center. The plans, subject to approval by the state banking department, also provide for a drive-in window.

Boy Can Read Numbers With Fingers, Toes

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP)—Mike Griesemer is a baseball-playing, 8-year-old who, blindfolded, can read numbers, letters and colors with his fingers and toes, he says—and gives demonstrations.

Mike, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman J. Griesemer of suburban Rotterdam, discovered his extrasensory perception after reading a magazine article last week.

Mike, testing with friends, said he found he could "see" with his fingers.

In several tests, he reports, he was able to read, blindfolded, the serial number on a dollar bill and the number, suit and design of playing cards. He also could determine alphabetical letters.

The only difficulty so far is distinguishing between a 6 and a 9.

Before trying colors, Mike used a glossy-surfaced, store catalogue to memorize their feel. Then he put on a blindfold and named them easily.

Red is sticky, he said, green is smooth, blue is "real sticky, like black," and yellow is "real, real sticky."

A scar on one finger is especially sensitive to reading, Mike said. Two of his reading fingers on his left hand were broken playing baseball. He wears a cast on his right arm, which was broken while he was climbing into the family swimming pool.

A blindfold is necessary for concentration, he told a reporter. He suffers from headaches after long sessions but can continue after a short rest.

Mike's latest trick is reading the number and suit of a card with his big right toe.

Mrs. Griesemer said her 6-year-old son Pat also can identify colors similarly.

The Griesemers live at 1121 Barber Drive, Rotterdam.

Boy Can Read Numbers With Fingers, Toes

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP)—Mike Griesemer is a baseball-playing, 8-year-old who, blindfolded, can read numbers, letters and colors with his fingers and toes, he says—and gives demonstrations.

Mike, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman J. Griesemer of suburban Rotterdam, discovered his extrasensory perception after reading a magazine article last week.

Mike, testing with friends, said he found he could "see" with his fingers.

In several tests, he reports, he was able to read, blindfolded, the serial number on a dollar bill and the number, suit and design of playing cards. He also could determine alphabetical letters.

The only difficulty so far is distinguishing between a 6 and a 9.

Before trying colors, Mike used a glossy-surfaced, store catalogue to memorize their feel. Then he put on a blindfold and named them easily.

Red is sticky, he said, green is smooth, blue is "real sticky, like black," and yellow is "real, real sticky."

A scar on one finger is especially sensitive to reading, Mike said. Two of his reading fingers on his left hand were broken playing baseball. He wears a cast on his right arm, which was broken while he was climbing into the family swimming pool.

A blindfold is necessary for concentration, he told a reporter. He suffers from headaches after long sessions but can continue after a short rest.

Mike's latest trick is reading the number and suit of a card with his big right toe.

Mrs. Griesemer said her 6-year-old son Pat also can identify colors similarly.

The Griesemers live at 1121 Barber Drive, Rotterdam.

the United States lost six jets bombing Hanoi and its suburbs Monday. (UPI RADIO-TELEPHOTO. PHOTO AND BASIC CAPTION INFORMATION FROM AN OFFICIAL COMMUNIST SOURCE)

U. S. Planes Keep Up Pressure On Reds' Battered Supply Lines

SAIGON (AP) — American warplanes kept up intensified pressure on North Vietnam's battered supply lines Tuesday with raids from the suburbs of Hanoi to within 30 miles of the Red Chinese frontier.

4th Bridge Attack

The U.S. Command said the principal targets were rail and road bridges around the North Vietnamese capital, including the big span across the Canal des Rapides only five miles from the city's center. It was the fourth attack on the bridge, one of Hanoi's two chief rail routes to China.

Returning pilots reported blistering anti-aircraft fire and barrages of surface-to-air missiles within the heavily defended North Vietnamese heartland, but there was no report of any losses. The previous day's raids cost six American planes.

It was the third day of heavy raids deep into North Vietnam and around the Hanoi-Haiphong road, rail and industrial complex. U.S. headquarters reported planes from Thailand, South Vietnam and three carriers in the Tonkin Gulf flew 162 missions during the day, continuing an above average rate that has been maintained recently during good weather.

The U.S. Command's combat maps showed no raids on Hanoi itself, although Soviet correspondents in Hanoi claimed American planes obliterated a densely populated block within the capital.

A Pravda correspondent said dozens of civilians were killed or wounded in rocket attacks that were "possibly the most violent bombings of the entire war."

In South Vietnam, the guerrilla war of attrition inflicted more casualties, but no large-scale actions were reported. In Saigon, an American GI was killed on the way to work, and scattered similar terror attacks occurred elsewhere, some aimed at disrupting the Sept. 3 presidential elections.

In the absence of heavy ground fighting, the main thrust of the American effort remained the air war on the supply lines from China south through North Vietnam to the Communist forces in the South. Warplanes streaked up the Red River to cut the northwest rail line from Hanoi to Red China in five places. A rail yard 30 miles from China was the northernmost target. Other raids smashed at the northeast line, the only other rail link between Hanoi and China which carries about 75 per cent of the traffic entering North Vietnam.

Returning pilots reported heavy damage to rolling stock massed in yards above Hanoi during a week of bad weather which began to break up last Sunday. The cars had been unable to move south because the main bridges into Hanoi had been dropped by bombing raids.

Pilots of an F105 Thunderchief raid on two rail sidings near the capital reported destroying or damaging from 45 to 65 boxcars but accurate assessment was impossible because of smoke and flames.

The Canal des Rapides bridge had been hit three times before, but since it was one of two main arteries into the city it had been the subject of intensive repair work.

The cruiser Boston and destroyer Berkeley moved inshore near Vinh to destroy five heavily loaded 90-foot barges. The previous day the Boston had destroyed a big steel observation tower which the Reds were putting up near Vinh probably for use as a spotter tower against naval raids.

40 Reds Killed

Military headquarters said 40 Communist soldiers—most of them North Vietnamese regulars—were killed in scattered fights along the coastal foothills of Quang Nam, Quang Tin, Quang Ngai and Binh Dinh provinces, where allied task forces have been maintaining intensive pressure to root out long-implanted guerrillas. American losses were not given. The Army reported the Viet Cong is making an intensive terrorist effort in the area to disrupt the election campaign and that consequently American and South Vietnamese patrolling had been increased.

The other center of fighting was the Mekong delta, where the usual spate of Communist hit-and-run attacks and night mortar assaults dotted the military maps.

Eight-engine B52 bombers struck in the northwest corner of South Vietnam today, jarring enemy storage areas and truck parks in the A Shau Valley.

Peking Radio today reported the capture of the pilot of one of two U.S. Navy A6 fighter jets downed when they strayed over Red China Monday just above the North Vietnamese border.

"One of the occupants of the U.S. aircraft was saved when he escaped by parachute and was taken prisoner," the broadcast said. "The other occupant crashed with his aircraft into a hill and was killed." It was inferred from the wording of the account that the second A6 jet crashed and its two crewmen were killed.

City Parade Sept. 23

Loyalty Plans Progressing

Local 461 Uniformed Firefighters' Association announced today that plans for the Loyalty Day parade Sept. 23, are shaping up to what may be the finest parade the city has ever seen.

Stewart AFB Coming

Several organizations have already indicated they are most happy to participate in such an outstanding and patriotic event. The U.S. Air Force Band from Stewart Field will lead the parade. Volunteer fire companies and union organizations have been among the first to indicate their willingness to participate.

Much praise has been afforded the firefighters for undertaking such a program. It is only proper that each and every citizen show their support and patriotism to our government and fighting men regardless of attitude. They, the fighting men, are giving up lives so we may live in a world that is free. To set aside a few hours on our loyalty day is not too much to ask of anyone. Our men in Vietnam are asked to give up a great deal more and stand behind them is certainly right. Let's all make it a point to join in on this day and show our loyalty," a local 461 spokesman said. Any organization that as yet has not planned to participate should begin immediately to formulate plans and contact the fire fighter's association by writing to parade chairman, C.P.O. Box 233, Kingston.

Welfare Group To Hear RFK, Rockefeller

The 1967 Northeast Regional Conference of the American Public Welfare Association will be held Sept. 5-8 at Grossinger.

The conference is honoring the New York State Board of Social Welfare on the 100th anniversary of its founding.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller will speak at the opening general session on Wednesday, Sept. 6. Hugh R. Jones, chairman of the New York State Board of Social Welfare, will be chairman of this session.

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy will be the principal speaker at the banquet meeting at 7 p. m., Thursday, Sept. 7.

Joseph H. Meyers, acting commissioner, Welfare Administration, U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, will be the principal speaker at the closing general session at 11:15 a. m., Friday, Sept. 8.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, AUGUST 23, 1967

Drunken Driving Menace

The increased number of automobile accidents involving young people who have been imbibing alcoholic beverages should bestir the District Attorney's office into action. The first move should be an all-out effort for the arrest and conviction of those who sell intoxicants to persons under the legal drinking age and to those who are under the influence of alcohol. Surely there is no gainsaying the fact that a drunken driver is a menace.

Since 18-year-olds are permitted to drive and to drink, it might be well to remind these young people that when they are licensed to operate a motor vehicle they receive the privilege of taking a death-dealing instrument on the highway. For this great privilege, society demands that the licensed driver act responsibly and prudently.

Drinking drivers are to blame for a large share of the fatal auto accidents and the hundreds of thousands of injured victims. There are more drinking drivers on the roads than most people realize and they do cause more fatal and non-fatal accidents than is generally presumed.

The street or highway is no place for an operator of a motor vehicle, whether young or old, who has handicapped himself by drinking.

The public will be protected against drunken driving when there is relentless teamwork of police enforcement agencies, stricter enforcement of the law and when jurors and judges act in the public interest.

Concern for Students

On the eve of the convention in Washington, D. C., of the American Federation of Teachers, Charles Cogen, the president of this teacher's union, predicted, "it is very, very questionable" that schools will open in New York, Detroit, Baltimore and several smaller cities due to contract disputes. He stated that more than 100,000 teachers would be unable to open school next month unless contracts were secured.

Cogen said there was a serious prospect of mass resignations in New York, where the federation represented 61,000 teachers, and of strikes in Detroit, where it represented 16,000. Resignation is the method the union advised in New York to get around the law forbidding strikes by public employees.

However, all was not so dismal in New York. A special mediation panel has whittled down the differences between the teachers union and the board of education. The board admits the need for higher salaries, and is seeking them as far as means will permit. It is resisting any impingement on educational policy matters, however.

The Negro teachers association, which claims a membership of half the 4,800-non-white teachers in the New York school system, has given notice it will not support mass resignations. Albert Vann, president of this group, said teachers in his association are members of the union, but they would keep the black community open and functioning by providing teachers, parents and other residents to conduct classes. He criticized the parent union for being more concerned with salaries and working conditions than "saving children and removing incompetent teachers."

It seems to us that in this instance, the association of non-white teachers has shown a greater concern for the good of the students than the bigger all-inclusive union. The policy of the student first, and the best deal obtainable for teachers next, should be the general aim for all in education.

Soviet Praise for U. S.

The diligence of most American workers, the efficient and polite service in stores and restaurants, the excellence of American highways, the transportation facilities, schools and libraries, the productivity of American farmers and the abundance and high quality work-saving devices for housewives, all come in for high praise in, of all places, a book published in the Soviet Union under the title, "Business-Like America."

The author is Nikolai N. Smelyakov, a Deputy Minister of Foreign Trade. It reflects his impressions and information gained while he was in the United States as head of Amtorg, a Soviet trade office, headquartered in New York. His book is full of an engineer's appreciation of organizational efficiency. He unhesitatingly recommends that many features of American capitalism be adopted by the Soviet Union.

At the same time, of course, Smelyakov condemns capitalism, and its offspring, unemployment, racial discrimination, concentration of wealth and the behavior of what he terms an "international gendarme." He had better find some flaws, else he could not have had his book published there. That he did get his message over was an achievement in itself. No doubt it means that others in trade and diplomatic missions with an opportunity to observe our way of life are equally impressed, though they dare not publish their impressions as openly.

"Living Conditions Don't Seem to Be Intolerable Here; There Haven't Been Any Riots Here Yet"

Fulbright's Views His Own

WASHINGTON — Congress can at any time adopt a resolution limiting the President's power to carry on the war in Vietnam. It is in fact, as President Johnson has challenged his critics to do, withdraw the 1964 resolution authorizing the use of armed force in Southeast Asia. Senator J. William Fulbright, Democrat of Arkansas, is mistaken, therefore, when he says that the only "real sanction" Congress has against escalation of the war in Vietnam would be "impeachment" of President Johnson.

There is, moreover, no such "sanction." For the Constitution plainly says that a President can be removed from office only "on impeachment, for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors."

Whenever a President exercises the authority given to him by Congress itself, whether in the form of a joint resolution or in laws appropriating funds for military operations, his acts are not personal but are those of the head of the executive branch of the government. The Constitution does not grant any authority to "impeach" a President for performing the duties of his office or for allegedly failing to act in accordance with resolutions passed by Congress. These are matters of policy and, if wrongly applied, the people can do the "removing" at the next election.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, of which Senator Fulbright is chairman, is engaged at present in a study of what is known as "separation of powers" in order to define the respective responsibilities of the executive and legislative branches of the government. But there's one field of inquiry into which the Senate probably will not venture, though it could define clearly and explicitly the line beyond which the Foreign Relations Committee itself may not go. For no committee by itself can interfere with executive operations or the conduct of foreign policy.

Many times in the last several decades a chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has undertaken to speak out against the foreign policy of the administration in power. This has happened even when he was a member of the party in control of the White House and State Department. Although their criticisms have at times unwittingly misled foreign governments, there is, of course, no way of "impeaching" such senators.

Mr. Fulbright's speeches in opposition to the administration's policy in Vietnam have been widely read abroad and have been taken to mean that the American people are divided and that at any moment President Johnson will find his powers in the Vietnam War curtailed. This tends to encourage the enemy to believe that, if the war is prolonged, the United States will be compelled to withdraw.

While several senators, as Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the past, have also unintentionally helped to mislead American's Adversaries, the fact remains that, when speeches and statements are publicized abroad, there is no clear line of "separation" between the views of a chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and those of the committee itself.

Members of Congress, of course, are familiar with the distinction, though it is assumed by the general public that, when the chairman of a Senate committee speaks, he is doing so with the authority and approval of the members of his committee. Mr. Fulbright is a conscientious man and is entitled to his viewpoint. But, as in the case of many of his predecessors, an erroneous idea is being derived as to the extent of the powers of a chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Thus, the speech made by Senator Fulbright discussing possible "impeachment" of the President is unquestionably his own view. In foreign countries, however, which are more familiar with the Parliamentary system of government, it doubtless has been concluded that, since Mr. Fulbright is a Democrat and his party is in control of both houses of Congress as well as the Presidency, Mr. Johnson's power to conduct the Vietnam War is in danger of being weakened or restricted.

There certainly is need to apply the doctrine of "separation of powers" to the viewpoint expressed by senators as individuals and those which they may formally express as chairman in behalf of a committee, particularly one as important as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The youngest of the sciences is called ethology. It is the study of animal behavior, and the word is only 22 years old. We have learned a great deal from animals, birds and insects, but we have a long way to go. My dog Rocky walks up to a floor mirror and sees another dog. His eyes tell him that there is another dog, but his nose tells him there isn't. He believes his nose, and walks away.

A tweedy zoologist friend of mine had an apartment in Central Park South, New York, and he kept a pair of birds in a big cage. The female, after mating, plucked reeds and twigs from the bottom of the cage and made a nest of intricate knots with a sailor's hitch. The moment the babies were hatched, my friend freed the parents and watched the next generation grow up. These two had never seen a bird. At mating time, the female began to make the nest with the identical knots.

It went on for five generations. Who taught her? Nobody. Then there must be something built into the brain called instinct. This is a weak word designed to cover a mystery. A newborn monkey, placed on the edge of a cliff, will back away in fright. Why? Who taught it the components of danger?

The black ant, to which 200 yards may be a day's travel, navigates by the sun. This can be proved by catching him on his way home, shielding him with an overhead screen, and placing a mirror so that light comes from a different direction. The ant will alter his course every time. With each step—if he has found food—he will leave a slight odor so that all the ants in his particular colony can find their way to the treasure.

Birds, animals and insects appear to be governed by the instincts of hunger, sex drive, self-preservation and residence. The latter refers to an area which the animal regards as belonging to him. To a bee, it may be one square mile, and he will sting an invader to death in that area. To a dog, it may be 50 feet of front lawn.

A domesticated dog may display "residence" by short squirts of urine on shrubs, trees and poles within the area of his home. He will do this even if his owner threatens him with punishment. Instinct forces him to leave his odor around his residence so that other dogs, approaching, will understand that this house is off-limits to them.

The little white tern will, without coaching, leave the Arctic wastes in winter to fly 7,500 miles over the trackless Atlantic to the flocks of ice below Cape Town, Africa. He averages 25 miles an hour and must keep his wings beating for 12 days without landfall, without food, and with nothing but celestial navigation to guide him.

Professor S. A. Barnett of Glasgow University, has studied animal behavior for many years and he is not sure he knows "why." In his latest book, "Instinct and Intelligence," published by Prentice-Hall, he opens a sensational world of animal observation. He tells about the neat female wasp, who will use a small pebble between her head and forelegs to iron the wrinkles out of her nest.

Some animals and insects, especially those who live in colonies, require the services of a dictator. Among wolves, the male who stands stiff-legged with tail up is the boss. All other wolves, including males, must approach him with head down, knees bent, and tail dragging. The queen bee, while waiting for workers bees to fetch food, permits young males to surround her and fan her with whirling wings. She wants the temperature of the nest to be within one-half degree of "normal."

Almost all birds, animals, insects and fish have a "threat" pose. When an intruder invades the "residence" area, beaks are opened, wings lifted, fangs are bared, hackles stand, fins become rigid. The purpose of the "threat" is not to fight or kill, but to warn the outsider. Usually, he departs at once.

The courtship and sex lives are often hilarious. A male cockroach will touch antennae with anyone he meets. Only the female antennae has a special secretion which excites him. At once he poses in a sexy position. The female then nibbles at his neck glands. They make love facing away from each other. A spider brings a dead fly to his wife. They make love for an hour and pause at times to refresh themselves with fillet of fly. Most incongruous of all is the working bee. When he finds fresh flowers, he brings pollen on his feet to the hive. Then he begins a dance. The thousands of other bees pause to watch.

He permits some to taste the pollen. Then he dances in a direct compass bearing to where the find is. The length of his line tells everyone how far the food is.

Any questions?... The children thus became the first fatalities in month-old campaign of bombing being waged by the Chinese Communist to bring this British colony to its knees. So far there have been nearly three dozen casualties, mostly Chinese bystanders, but all have survived their injuries.

Some 1,000 bombs have been found so far, with roughly one-fifth of them alive. These have been found in buses and garbage cans, in doorways, on streetcar tracks, by a swimming pool and in a hotel elevator. The worst until now was a bobby trapped straw effigy hanging near a busy bus stop. When a beggar pulled at it, eight people were wounded, including three children.

Drew Pearson Says Castro's U. S. Guerrilla War

WASHINGTON — Following up his call for guerrilla warfare in the United States, Cuban Dictator Fidel Castro is preparing to sneak a Negro revolutionary into the United States to direct the guerrilla movement.

An intelligence report identifies him as Robert Williams, who already has contacts among Negro extremists. It was Williams reportedly who arranged for Stokely Carmichael to go to Cuba.

Williams presumably will attempt to recruit other Negroes, who will be sent to Cuba by the same underground route — via Prague — for guerrilla training.

Already Williams has smuggled thousands of incendiary leaflets into the United States, exhorting Negroes to take up weapons against the whites and giving do-it-yourself instructions in sabotage.

A former U.S. Marine, Robert Williams became a Negro hero of sorts after he organized armed resistance to a Ku Klux Klan drive into the colored section of Monroe, N. C. He threw up a sandbag barricade, positioned his followers behind it, and ordered them to fire on the approaching Klansmen.

With a great flapping of white sheets, the Klansmen, though armed themselves, fled in panic. They prefer to terrorize defenseless Negroes.

During a subsequent race riot, Williams held a white couple in his home. He was charged with kidnapping, and escaped to Havana in August, 1961, just a jump ahead of the FBI.

He has been shuttling between Havana and Peking ever since. The intelligence report claims he is now on his way back from China to head up Castro's U.S.-bound guerrillas.

Cardinal Talks Politics
Boston's colorful Richard Cardinal Cushing, the intimate friend and spiritual adviser to the Kennedy clan, has predicted privately that Sen. Robert Kennedy, D-N.Y., will never make the White House.

The difference between the late Jack Kennedy's successful campaign and Bobby Kennedy's prospects, the Cardinal explained to friends, is the illness of their father.

Without old Joe Kennedy pulling wires in the back room, the Cardinal suggested, Bobby won't win the Presidency.

The prelate jovially recalled how he and old Joe, both hard-shell Catholics, made strategic contributions to Protestant ministers in West Virginia to help win friends and influence voters for Jack Kennedy in the crucial 1960 West Virginia primary.

"We donated $200 to some, $500 to others—and a few got $1,000—depending upon the size of their congregations," confessed the Cardinal, chuckling merrily.

Talcott and Teague
The plight of the migrant workers has been getting attention in the press lately, but it has received little attention from Congress.

The powerful California and Texas delegations, with few exceptions, are lined up on the side of the big ranchers against their underpaid stoop laborers.

Two of the most vociferous champions of the ranchers are Congressmen Burt Talcott and Charles Teague, both Republicans, who represent adjoining California districts. Teague's family owns Limonera Ranch, the world's largest lemon producer. Although Talcott is not himself a rancher, his law firm represents the packing and processing houses that do business with the ranchers.

Douglas Double-Crossed

Talcott and Teague have always stood together in the House curbs on the admission of cheap Mexican labor, favoring legislation that benefits the ranchers, crying out in angry duet against any infringement upon the feudal rule of the big ranch owners.

In a chat within this column, white-thatched Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas confirmed that he had been eulogized out of the Vice Presidential nomination at the 1944 Democratic convention. The nomination went instead to Harry S. Truman, who succeeded Franklin D.

Roosevelt a year later as President.

Douglas was told by Grace Tully, FDR's private secretary, that President Roosevelt had dictated a letter to the Chicago convention, saying he would accept either Douglas or Truman as his running mate. She said that Douglas's name had been listed first.

But Bob Hannegan, then Democratic National Chairman, wanted Truman. Hannegan intercepted Roosevelt's letter and retyped it for release with Truman's name first. Thus the press and public got the idea that Truman was FDR's favorite, and the convention carried out history.

At a subsequent cocktail party, Douglas recalled, a beaming Hannegan came up to him.

"I guess we boxed you in," he said amiably.

"If I ever need a campaign manager," replied Douglas with equal good humor, "I'll call on you."

The recollection of how close he came to the Presidency, however, "has ground at Douglas all these years," says a friend. The rugged old jurist has hungered for the chance the Presidency would have given him possibly to maintain the historic Chinese-American friendship, thus averting the Korean and Vietnam wars.

He was in touch with Red Chinese leaders who persuaded him that they had no desire to be dominated by Russia. He always felt that China and Russia, facing each other across the world's longest border, inevitably would clash. He remains convinced that timely and friendly recognition of Red China would have kept the Chinese neutral and would have avoided two decades of crises in Asia. Justice Douglas still hangs on to the hope that, somehow the pieces of the old Chinese-American friendship can be picked up. He obtained State Department approval last year for a visit behind the Bamboo Curtain, but the Chinese never responded to his travel request. Earlier this year, despite the convulsion in China, he renewed his application.

Franco's Standing Is Higher

MADRID — Much of the world is not for changing planes, it's for changing one's viewpoint. Fly here and see why.

The revision begins with our home view about Francisco Franco's grass-roots standing with the Spanish people.

I interviewed Franco for the first time 24 years ago. Contrary to foreign impressions, he stood high then and, believe it or not, he obviously stands higher now.

The reasons do not require foreigners' approval or disapproval but the truth about Franco's status here has been pitched to us with a curve.

In Southern Europe it is said that the Spaniards have a sense of drama; the Portuguese have common sense. The difference between the two Iberian Peninsula countries is not just geographic. The difference in temperament is far more important. Franco and Portugal's Antonio Salazar epitomize this difference, yet both hold records inside their own countries, and in Europe, for tenures that make an upstart of even such other long-term dictators as Tito.

Franco's proudest boast—"We were the first European nation to fight Communism, and to win!"—still profitably identifies him among countless millions here. But more than 1½ million Spaniards died in the civil war.

Spain had her horrible war. Franco gains even more profit as the man who kept the people out of World War II.

Franco is elevated to the rank of wisdom by Spaniards who look at the disaster to their Mediterranean cousins in Mussolini's Italy.

As for the widespread complaints about conditions, there is generally a tendency in any public to shift its blame to the minions around the leader instead of placing responsibility squarely at the top, where it belongs. "It's not him so much," you hear. This is what you hear here.

The older generation has never known anything but Franco, age 75, for 31 years and is passive about any alternative. The youth and many articulate intellectuals want changes of all sorts—provided these avoid violence.

From Bilbao in the north to Algeiras in the south you find that the list includes land reform, education reform, anti-monopoly measures, press freedoms and more freedoms for workers to organize, better wages and lower living costs. But Spain is a compartmentalized country by nature and the pressures are not unified.

The people of Catalonia in the east (Barcelona), busy and noisy as castanets, remain Catalans; Galicia's thrifty, sea-minded northerners remain Galicians (Franco is a Galician); Basques remain Basques, and even Madrid's people remain uniquely Madrilenian, all with different insistences and aspirations.

The common denominators nationwide are the church and the army, both of which likewise want changes—but, again, without violence.

Most Spaniards make quick movements, Franco's gestures are slow and deliberate. He is a slow-acting man, so slow-acting that even in this country of manana this is widely regarded as his dominant characteristic. Many of the complaints are rooted in the idea that he's too slow-acting to get anything done.

But Franco has brought much younger men into his Cabinet, sorely needed. For example, Minister of Public Works Frederico Silva Munoz is 42, over-all economic chief Laureano Lopez Rodo is 45, etc. One observer noted that the average age of Franco's 18-man Cabinet is now no higher than was that of the Cabinet of the late President Kennedy.

Spain's amazing economic recovery, relatively equal to the West German miracle, has increasingly dissolved the clouds. And in this change this country has handsomely served the American interest, as my further dispatches intend to explain, while Spain, in turn, has chiefly to thank the United States.

Children First to Die

BY MARK GAYN
Chicago Daily News Foreign Service

Hong Kong — A Chinese girl of 7 and boy of 2 playing in the blind alley in which they live last night picked up a can, and both were mangled and killed in the explosion.

The children thus became the first fatalities in month-old campaign of bombing being waged by the Chinese Communist to bring this British colony to its knees. So far there have been nearly three dozen casualties, mostly Chinese bystanders, but all have survived their injuries.

Some 1,000 bombs have been found so far, with roughly one-fifth of them alive. These have been found in buses and garbage cans, in doorways, on streetcar tracks, by a swimming pool and in a hotel elevator. The worst until now was a bobby trapped straw effigy hanging near a busy bus stop. When a beggar pulled at it, eight people were wounded, including three children.

The planting of bombs remains indiscriminate, and its sole aim is clearly terror. But a leading British specialist on explosives here last night noted the growing sophistication and destructive power of these weapons. In the last week, terrorists blew up a truck loaded with workers and a police jeep with bombs detonated from a mountain overlooking a heavily traveled road.

The bombs and hand grenades are still locally made. The makers use either powder extracted from firecrackers or gelignite stolen in huge quantities from construction sites in the city. But if Peking has not been supplying explosives to the terrorists, it has given them its argument that the "oppressed compatriots" have no choice but to resort to "crude weapons." The British insist that the extremists turned to bombs when they found the colony's 4,000,000 (M) "compatriots" largely unwilling to join in strikes and demonstrations.

Peking last night again projected itself into the local picture with a formal protest to Britain against the suspension of three Communist newspapers here. Four days ago a Hong Kong court ordered the three to halt publication for printing inflammatory matter. The three dailies (the largest with a circulation of 70,000) defied the court order by publishing a one-page joint handout. On Saturday they were raided by police, who entered through the front door and the heavily barricaded roof. They found the printers setting type for another edition.

Peking's note described the suspension of the newspapers as illegal, protested the arrest of "patriotic" Chinese reporters and declared that it was the "sacred duty" of the Chinese newspapers to "disseminate the thought of Mao Tse-tung."

The note gave the British 48 hours to lift the ban on the three newspapers and release the 19 Chinese reporters arrested in the last two months on such charges as inciting to violence and writing inflammatory material. "Otherwise," Peking said, "the British government will be held responsible for all the serious consequences arising therefrom."

Drunken Driving Menace

The increased number of automobile accidents involving young people who have been imbibing alcoholic beverages should bestir the District Attorney's office into action. The first move should be an all-out effort for the arrest and conviction of those who sell intoxicants to persons under the legal drinking age and to those who are under the influence of alcohol. Surely there is no gainsaying the fact that a drunken driver is a menace.

Since 18-year-olds are permitted to drive and to drink, it might be well to remind these young people that when they are licensed to operate a motor vehicle they receive the privilege of taking a death-dealing instrument on the highway. For this great privilege, society demands that the licensed driver act responsibly and prudently.

Drinking drivers are to blame for a large share of the fatal auto accidents and the hundreds of thousands of injured victims. There are more drinking drivers on the roads than most people realize and they do cause more fatal and non-fatal accidents than is generally presumed.

The street or highway is no place for an operator of a motor vehicle, whether young or old, who has handicapped himself by drinking.

The public will be protected against drunken driving when there is relentless teamwork of police enforcement agencies, stricter enforcement of the law and when jurors and judges act in the public interest.

Concern for Students

On the eve of the convention in Washington, D. C., of the American Federation of Teachers, Charles Cogen, the president of this teacher's union, predicted, "it is very, very questionable" that schools will open in New York, Detroit, Baltimore and several smaller cities due to contract disputes. He stated that more than 100,000 teachers would be unable to open school next month unless contracts were secured.

Cogen said there was a serious prospect of mass resignations in New York, where the federation represented 61,000 teachers, and of strikes in Detroit, where it represented 16,000. Resignation is the method the union advised in New York to get around the law forbidding strikes by public employees.

However, all was not so dismal in New York. A special mediation panel has whittled down the differences between the teachers union and the board of education. The board admits the need for higher salaries, and is seeking them as far as means will permit. It is resisting any impingement on educational policy matters, however.

The Negro teachers association, which claims a membership of half the 4,800-non-white teachers in the New York school system, has given notice it will not support mass resignations. Albert Vann, president of this group, said teachers in his association are members of the union, but they would keep the black community open and functioning by providing teachers, parents and other residents to conduct classes. He criticized the parent union for being more concerned with salaries and working conditions than "saving children and removing incompetent teachers."

It seems to us that in this instance, the association of non-white teachers has shown a greater concern for the good of the students than the bigger all-inclusive union. The policy of the student first, and the best deal obtainable for teachers next, should be the general aim for all in education.

In his latest book, "Instinct and Intelligence," published by Prentice-Hall, he opens a sensational world of animal observation. He tells about the most miles over the trackless Atlantic to the flocks of ice below Capetown, Africa. He averages 25 miles an hour and must keep his wings beating for 12 days without landfall, without food, and with nothing but celestial navigation to guide him.

especially those who live in colonies, require the services of a dictator. Among wolves, the male who stands stiff-legged with tail up is the boss. All other wolves, including males, must approach him with head down, knees bent, and tail dragging. The queen bee, while waiting for workers bees to fetch food, permits young males to surround her and fan her with whirling wings. She wants the temperature of the nest to be within one-half degree of "normal."

Almost all birds, animals, insects and fish have a "threat" pose. When an intruder invades the "residence" area, beaks are opened, wings lifted, fangs are bared, hackles stand, fins become rigid. The purpose of the "threat" is not to fight or kill, but to warn the outsider. Usually, he departs at once.

The courtship and sex lives are often hilarious. A male cockroach will touch antennae with anyone he meets. Only the female antennae has a special secretion which excites him. At once he poses in a sexy position. The female then nibbles at his neck glands. They make love facing away from each other.

A spider brings a dead fly to his wife. They make love for an hour and pause at times to refresh themselves with flet of fly. Most incongruous of all is the working bee. When he finds fresh flowers, he brings pollen on his feet to the hive. Then he begins a dance. The thousands of other bees pause to watch. He permits some to taste the pollen. Then he dances in a direct compass bearing to where the find is. The length of his legs tells everyone how far the food is.

Any questions?...

Castro's U. S. Guerrilla War

WASHINGTON — Following up his call for guerrilla warfare in the United States, Cuban Dictator Fidel Castro is preparing to sneak a Negro revolutionary into the United States to direct the guerrilla movement.

An intelligence report identifies him as Robert Williams, who already has contacts among Negro extremists. It was Williams reportedly who arranged for Stokely Carmichael to go to Cuba.

Williams presumably will attempt to recruit other Negroes, who will be sent to Cuba by the same underground route — via Prague — for guerrilla training.

Already Williams has smuggled thousands of incendiary leaflets into the United States, exhorting Negroes to take up weapons against the whites and giving do-it-yourself instructions in sabotage.

A former U.S. Marine, Robert Williams became a Negro hero of sorts after he organized armed resistance to a Ku Klux Klan drive into the colored section of Monroe, N. C. He threw up a sandbag barricade, positioned his followers behind it, and ordered them to fire on the approaching Klansmen.

With a great flapping of white sheets, the Klansmen, though armed themselves, fled in panic. They prefer to terrorize defenseless Negroes. During a subsequent race riot, Williams held a white couple in his home. He was charged with kidnapping, and escaped to Havana in August, 1961, just a jump ahead of the FBI.

He has been shuttling between Havana and Peking ever since. The intelligence report claims he is now on his way back from China to head up Castro's U.S.-bound guerrillas.

Cardinal Talks Politics
Boston's colorful Richard Cardinal Cushing, the intimate friend and spiritual adviser to the Kennedy clan, has predicted privately that Sen. Robert Kennedy, D.-N.Y., will never make the White House.

The difference between the late Jack Kennedy's successful campaign and Bobby Kennedy's prospects, the Cardinal explained to friends, is the illness of their father.

Without old Joe Kennedy pulling wires in the back room, the Cardinal suggested, Bobby won't win the Presidency.

The prelate jovially recalled how he and old Joe, both hard-shell Catholics, made strategic contributions to Protestant ministers in West Virginia to help win friends and influence voters for Jack Kennedy in the crucial 1960 West Virginia primary.

"We donated $200 to some, $500 to others—and a few got $1,000—depending upon the size of their congregations," confessed the Cardinal, chuckling merrily.

Talcott and Teague
The plight of the migrant workers has been getting attention in the press lately, but it has received little attention from Congress.

The powerful California and Texas delegations, with few exceptions, are lined up on the side of the big ranchers against their underpaid stoop laborers.

Two of the most vociferous champions of the ranchers are Congressmen Burt Talcott and Charles Teague, both Republicans, who represent adjoining California districts. Teague's family owns Limonera Ranch, the world's largest lemon producer. Although Talcott is not himself a rancher, his law firm represents the packing and processing houses that do business with the ranchers.

Douglas Double-Crossed
Talcott and Teague have always stood together in the House curbs on the admission of cheap Mexican labor, favoring legislation that benefits the ranchers, crying out in angry duet against any infringement upon the feudal rule of the big ranch owners.

In a chat within this column, white-thatched Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas confirmed that he had been enmeshed out of the Vice Presidential nomination at the 1944 Democratic convention. The nomination went instead to Harry S. Truman, who succeeded Franklin D.

Roosevelt a year later as President.

Douglas was told by Grace Tully, FDR's private secretary, that President Roosevelt had dictated a letter to the Chicago convention, saying he would accept either Douglas or Truman as his running mate. She said that Douglas's name had been listed first.

But Bob Hannegan, then Democratic National Chairman, wanted Truman. Hannegan intercepted Roosevelt's letter and retyped it for release with Truman's name first. Thus the press and public got the idea that Truman was FDR's favorite, and the convention carried out history.

At a subsequent cocktail party, Douglas recalled, a beaming Hannegan came up to him.

"It guess we boxed you in," he said amiably.

"If I ever made a campaign manager," replied Douglas with equal good humor, "I'll call on you."

The recollection of how close he came to the Presidency, however, "has ground at Douglas all these years," says a friend. The rugged old jurist has hungered for the chance the Presidency would have given him possibly to maintain the historic Chinese-American friendship, thus averting the Korean and Vietnam wars.

He was in touch with Red Chinese leaders who persuaded him that they had no desire to be dominated by Russia. He always felt that China and Russia, facing each other across the world's longest border, inevitably would clash. He remains convinced that timely and friendly recognition of Red China would have kept the Chinese neutral and would have avoided two decades of crises in Asia.

Justice Douglas still hangs on to the hope that, somehow the pieces of the old Chinese-American friendship can be picked up. He obtained State Department approval last year for a visit behind the Bamboo Curtain, but the Chinese never responded to his travel request. Earlier this year, despite the convulsion in China, he renewed his application.

Henry J. Taylor Says

Franco's Standing Is Higher

MADRID — Much of the world is not for changing planes, it's for changing one's viewpoint. Fly here and see why.

The revision begins with our home view about Francisco Franco's grass-roots standing with the Spanish people.

I interviewed Franco for the first time 24 years ago. Contrary to foreign impressions, he stood high then and, believe it or not, he obviously stands higher now.

The reasons do not require foreigners' approval or disapproval but the truth about Franco's status here has been pitched to us with a curve.

In Southern Europe it is said that the Spaniards have a sense of drama; the Portuguese have common sense. The difference between the two Iberian Peninsula countries is not just geographic. The difference in temperament is far more important.

Franco and Portugal's Antonio Salazar epitomize this difference, yet both hold records inside their own countries, and in Europe, for tenures that make an upstart of even such other long-term dictators as Tito.

Franco's proudest boast—"We were the first European nation to fight communism, and to win"—is still profitably identifies him among countless millions here. But more than 1½ million Spaniards died in the civil war.

Spain had her horrible war. Franco gains even more profit as the man who kept the people out of World War II.

Franco is elevated to the rank of wisdom by Spaniards who look at the disaster to their Mediterranean cousins in Mussolini's Italy.

As for the widespread complaints about conditions, there is generally a tendency in any public to shift its blame to the minions around the leader instead of placing responsibility squarely at the top, where it belongs. "It's not him so much," you hear. This is what you hear here.

The older generation has never known anything but Franco, age 75, for 31 years and is passive about any alternative. The youth and many articulate intellectuals want changes of all sorts—provided these avoid violence.

From Bilbao in the north to Algeiras in the south you find that the list includes land reform, education reform, anti-monopoly measures, press freedoms and more freedoms for workers to organize, better wages and lower living costs. But Spain is a compartmentalized country by nature and the pressures are not unified.

The people of Catalonia in the east (Barcelona), busy and noisy as castanets, remain intransigent. Galicia's thrifty, sea-minded northerners remain Galicians (Franco is a Galician); Basques remain Basques, and even Madrid's people remain uniquely Madridians, all with different insinuations and aspirations. The common denominators nationwide are the church and the army, both of which likewise want changes—but, again, without violence.

Most Spaniards make quick movements. Franco's gestures are slow and deliberate. He is a slow-acting man, so slow-acting that even in this country of manana this is widely regarded as his dominant characteristic. Many of the complaints are rooted in the idea that he's too slow-acting to get anything done.

But Franco has brought much younger men into his Cabinet, surely needed. For example, Minister of Public Works Federico Silva Munoz is 42, over-40 economic chief Laureano Lopez Roda is 45, etc. One observer noted that the average age of Franco's 18-man Cabinet is now no higher than was that of the Cabinet of the late President Kennedy.

Spain's amazing economic recovery, relatively equal to the West German miracle, has increasingly dissolved the clouds. And in this change this country has handsomely served the American interest, as my further dispatches intend to explain, while Spain, in turn, has chiefly to thank the United States.

Children First to Die

BY MARK GAYN

Chicago Daily News Foreign Service

Hong Kong — A Chinese girl of 7 and boy of 2 playing in the blind alley in which they live last night picked up a can, and both were mangled and killed in the explosion.

The children thus became the first fatalities in month-old campaign of bombing being waged by the Chinese Communist to bring this British colony to its knees. So far there have been nearly three dozen casualties, mostly Chinese bystanders, but all have survived their injuries.

Some 1,000 bombs have been found so far, with roughly one-fifth of them alive. These have been found in buses and garbage cans, in doorways, on streetcar tracks, by a swimming pool and in a hotel elevator. The worst now was a booby trapped stray affigy hanging near a busy bus stop. When a beggar pulled at it, eight people were wounded, including three children.

The planting of bombs remains indiscriminate, and its sole aim is clearly terror. But a leading British specialist on explosives here last night noted the growing sophistication and destructive power of these weapons. In the last week, terrorists blew up a truck loaded with workers and a police jeep with bombs detonated from a mountain overlooking a heavily traveled road.

The bombs and hand grenades are still locally made. The makers use either powder extracted from firecrackers or gelignite stolen in huge quantities from construction sites in the city. But if Peking has not been supplying explosives to the terrorists, it has given them its argument that the "oppressed compatriots" have no choice but to resort to "crude weapons." The British insist that the extremists turned to bombs when they found the colony's 4,000,000 (M) "compatriots" largely unwilling to join in strikes and demonstrations.

Peking last night again projected itself into the local picture with a formal protest to Britain against the suspension of three Communist newspapers here. Four days ago a Hong Kong court ordered the three to halt publication for printing inflammatory matter. The three dailies (the largest with a circulation of 70,000) defied the court order by publishing a one-page joint handout. On Saturday they were raided by police, who entered through the front door and the heavily barricaded roof. They found the printers setting type for another edition.

Peking's note described the suspension of the newspapers as illegal, protested the arrest of "patriotic" Chinese reporters and declared that it was the "sacred duty" of the Chinese newspapers to "disseminate the thought of Mao Tse-tung."

The note gave the British 48 hours to lift the ban on the three newspapers and release the 19 Chinese reporters arrested in the last two months on such charges as inciting to violence and writing inflammatory material. "Otherwise," Peking said, "the British government will be held responsible for all the serious consequences arising therefrom."

Flood of Poverty Bills, Programs in Congress

By DAVID MURRAY
Chicago Sun-Times Special

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21—Aside from the question of Vietnam and who is doing what, with what and to whom, the big bag in Washington this summer is whether the Congress, reacting to the national revulsion over race riots, will provide any meaningful urban legislation.

There's a welter of bills and programs. Every relatively liberal senator with an urban constituency seems to have a bill or a program in, some overlapping others, some so far out that they will never survive a first looking-over in a committee.

The one that most of the talk is about, however, is the $2,066,000,000 (B) request for the war on poverty, and it was to this that Sargent Shriver, director of The Office of Economic Opportunity addressed himself in an interview last week.

Is there a real sea change, he was asked. Are people just angry enough or tired enough of the poverty program not to give it any muscle this year?

"I don't think there's a sea change," Shriver said. "There are whitecaps, but a good sailor doesn't judge the water by the whitecaps. He studies the swell of the sea. Right now, people are concentrating on whitecaps."

But he admitted the opposition was there. And not only from senators like James O. Eastland (D-Miss.)

and John L. McClellan (D-Ark.), who give every appearance of believing if you put black radicals like Rap Brown and Stokely Carmichael out of business you've got the problems of the cities licked.

Middle Guy Prejudiced
"People are prejudiced against the poor," Shriver said. "The rich aren't so much, nor the intellectuals, nor the poor themselves. But it's the guy who's in the middle—the great mass—He's prejudiced."

"It's the guy who gets up to an income of say $6,000 a year who says the hell with helping who's got $2,000. They're people who are threatened—ethnic groups like the Italians and Poles who've been poor themselves."

These groups, Shriver said, rebel against "a lack of gratitude" by the rioters in the cities.

"They don't know any Negroes. The only ones they're aware of are the most visible."

He paused and looked out the office window in the tall downtown Washington building that is so far from the ghettos in space but not in mind.

What's the answer? he was asked.
"We've got to wait for a whole generation of people to die," he said, and there was gloom in his voice.

"Whenever there's a catastrophe, people look around for somebody to blame. People have a tendency to look outside themselves for their own inadequacies."

At a cocktail party in Washington or Wilmette, Ill., or Westchester County, N. Y., that last remark would border on the fatuous. Pseudopsychiatry and that sort of thing.

But in that office, with its unseen vista of smoldering cities and a disillusioned, desperate "other America," it doesn't sound in the least fatuous.

What comes on strongest about Shriver is a feeling that he is one of God's angry men. He feels poverty, and he feels with a cut-chilling hatred that transcends the intellect and goes right to the emotions.

He is impatient, not with people who oppose his programs, not with a methodical and sometimes dilatory congress, but impatient with himself.

His language is often the language of the streets, of the litter-cluttered, rat-stinking alleys. He sits at a conference table and fiddles constantly—now writing in block capitals on a note pad a phrase about what he's talking about. If it's birth control, he writes "family planning."

Talking to him, you can't help being reminded of the battalion commander who hears the guns and sees the wounded being carried back off the line and would love nothing better than to be up there himself but can't be because someone has to sit and sweat it.

Shriver Confident

Shriver is not without confidence that the poverty program will get just about the amount that has been asked.

The flurry of disgust that followed the riots this summer swept the poverty program in with it, along with charges that workers paid out of Federal funds had not only participated in the riots but had fomented them.

The OEO, after suffering in silence for a while, finally came back a couple of weeks ago and supplied information to anyone who would listen that poverty workers were a cooling influence on the riots.

For example, in Detroit, Shriver said, Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh used the OEO's 19 community centers for rehabilitation units.

"They never closed during the riot," Shriver said.

East Germany Bitter

By DONALD SHANOR
Chicago Daily News Foreign Service

BONN — East Germany is in the midst of one of its harshest propaganda campaigns against West Germany's new policy of trade and diplomatic relations with the Soviet bloc.

It is not the words but the deeds that worry West Germans. They are afraid the Communists are beginning a parallel campaign of arrest and harassment of West German citizens traveling in eastern Europe.

One West German, Mrs. Annemarie Berlig, was arrested in Hungary at the request of the East Germans and turned over to East German security agents.

Mrs. Berlig had fled East Germany in 1960. But Communist Chief Walter Ulbricht has ordered that refugees remain East German citizens. The East Germans used their extradition agreement with Hungary to obtain Mrs. Berlig's arrest on charges of espionage.

Ulbricht has similar agreements with the other bloc nations. He is in a position to use them to inhibit travel by West German businessmen and tourists as fast as Bonn's trade and diplomatic treaties open up these countries.

The East Germans apparently fear that Bonn's new policies will isolate them in eastern Europe, Hungary, Romania, and the other bloc countries.

Officials here do not believe that Romania will cooperate with the East German harassment tactics. It ignored Ulbricht's pleas earlier this year when it began diplomatic relations with Bonn.

As Foreign Minister Willy Brandt's successful visit to Bucharest showed, Romania is anxious to benefit all it can from the new ties.

But the situation in Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia may be different. Bonn concluded a trade pact with the Czechs this month and wants to re-establish its broken diplomatic relations with the Yugoslavs as soon as possible.

Unlike the agreement with Romania, the Czech treaty affords West Germans no diplomatic protection. And because of the 30 years of bad feelings between Czechoslovakia and Germany, dating from the Sudeten crisis, there may be many scores the Czechs will want to settle with individual German visitors.

Yugoslavia, according to some reports, has worked closely with Ulbricht's security agents for some time, and co-operated in the arrest of two Germans there last year.

The government announced over the weekend that 56 West Germans are presently in prisons in the east European countries. Four of them, including Mrs. Berlig, have been turned over to the East German authorities from other bloc nations, it said.

Neues Deutschland, the East German Communist newspaper, took notice of this:

Foreign tourists are always welcome in the Socialist countries when they observe the laws and sovereignty of these countries and do not let themselves be misled by imperialist secret services," it said.

What troubles the West Germans is that it is up to the Communists to decide who is a legitimate tourist and who is an imperialist agent.

The World Today

What Comes After the War?

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — No-body says much about what comes after the war in Vietnam. But it looks grim. There's no need for guessing on one point: The Communists would take over instantly if the United States pulled out now. Assume it won't. The following is what the picture may look like if the United States stays until a settlement.

No one is predicting how long the war will last. Say at the end of another year, or two or three, the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese are badly beaten or beaten enough to agree to peace.

The North Vietnamese would have to withdraw behind their own frontier. That's for sure. The Viet Cong are another problem. Suppose it's the kind of peace that lets the Viet Cong take part in the negotiations.

That would be a problem in itself. It seems unlikely there would be any agreement letting them take part in the South Vietnamese government. That would be like turning a tiger loose. They are organized, disciplined and dedicated to taking over the government. They would be dealing with the South Vietnamese who, even though they have had a government of sorts, are split into factions.

The splits would make it easier for the organized Viet Cong to assert themselves. This might take time. They have time. And the Viet Cong in the government would have plenty of help. The rest of the Viet Cong guerrillas, even with their guns stowed away, could stay in the South as part of the population and be in a prime position to dominate by persuasion and subversion even if they did no shooting.

If the Viet Cong are kept out of the government, but through a general amnesty are permitted to remain part of the population, they are still in a prime position for subversion. The United States would realize all this. It would probably want to keep troops there for some time. There would be opposition at home. And the North Vietnamese have consistently insisted on American withdrawal.

Therefore, the United States might agree to a compromise: That it would keep troops in South Vietnam only a limited time until a government had achieved some stability. Even then Viet Cong subversion could continue.

But suppose everything turned out dandy: life in South Vietnam continues in an orderly way, there are legal elections, no revolts, and suppose then the United States eventually withdraws. Does that mean South Vietnam is safe?

Hardly, unless the Viet Cong lose their dedication and the North Vietnamese their determination. The departure of the Americans would be an open door to a new try at a takeover, even though slowly at first.

New Problem Ahead

But by that time, say 10 years from now, there will be a new problem. Red China by then will have developed a nuclear arsenal and a missile system, capable of hitting all Asia, the Soviet Union, Europe and the United States.

When they have achieved that strength, judging by their past performance, the Red Chinese will be in a position to try to make Communist satellites of all their neighbors.

Then, it can be assumed, an attempt definitely will be made to capture South Vietnam. How? In one of several ways: pressure, subversion, a new attack from the North.

It doesn't seem reasonable to think any of the small Southeast Asian nations will try to resist Communism if by then U. S. forces have been withdrawn. Would the United States rush back into the defense of South Vietnam, once it was out of Southeast Asia and Red China was a nuclear power?

Perhaps not if it meant nuclear war with Red China. Perhaps this is the best American hope: that when the present fanatical Peking leadership dies or fades away a more moderate bunch of leaders, as in Moscow after Stalin, will emerge.

With them it might be easier to talk reasonable settlements. This hope is perhaps the best excuse for the present American involvement. If this sounds like a gloomy view, at least it's an attempt to be realistic.

Do you think the United States would let Red China move physically into the Western Hemisphere? You had the answer when President John F. Kennedy was ready to risk war with the Soviet Union in order to force its missiles out of Cuba.

"We've got to wait for a whole generation of people to die," he said, and there was gloom in his voice.

"Whenever there's a catastrophe, people look around for somebody to blame. People have a tendency to look outside themselves for their own inadequacies."

At a cocktail party in Washington or Wilmette, Ill., or Westchester County, N. Y., that last remark would border on the fatuous. Pseudopsychiatry and that sort of thing.

But in that office, with its unseemly vista of smoldering cities and a disillusioned, desperate "other America," it doesn't sound in the least fatuous.

What comes on strongest about Shriver is a feeling that he is one of God's angry men. He feels poverty, and he feels with a cut-chilling hatred that transcends the intellect and goes right to the emotions.

He is impatient, not with people who oppose his programs, not with a methodical and sometimes dilatory congress, but impatient with himself.

His language is often the language of the streets, of the litter-cluttered, rat-stinking alleys. He sits at a conference table and fiddles constantly—now writing in block capitals on a note pad a phrase about what he's talking about. If it's birth control, he writes "family planning."

Talking to him, you can't help being reminded of the battalion commander who hears the guns and sees the wounded being carried back off the line and would love nothing better than to be up there himself but can't be because someone has to sit and sweat it.

Shriver Confident

Shriver is not without confidence that the poverty program will get just about the amount that has been asked.

The flurry of disgust that followed the riots this summer swept the poverty program in with it, along with charges that workers paid out of Federal funds had not only participated in the riots but had fomented them.

The OEO, after suffering in silence for a while, finally came back a couple of weeks ago and supplied information to anyone who would listen that poverty workers were a cooling influence on the riots.

For example, in Detroit, Shriver said, Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh used the OEO's 19 community centers for rehabilitation units.

"They never closed during the riot," Shriver said.

Twenty and Ten Years Ago

Aug. 23, 1947—Following earlier reports of a bear in Forsyth Park, tracks were found in the Ponckhockie sector of the city.

Reports of a an outbreak during a state firemen's convention in Catskill were reported to be grossly exaggerated.

Aug. 23, 1957—The Ulster County Fair at Forsyth Park drew an estimated 15,000 persons.

Start of work on the Kingston Arterial was awaited on orders from Washington. The federal government was paying 90 per cent of the cost.

They were also, he pointed out, relatively free as targets of violence.

"They were sanctuaries," he continued. "Some of them are still standing in blocks that otherwise were razed."

He argues the case for the poverty program on any level you want to choose. Economically, he said, it's deflationary. He added:

"We put a lot of capital into a little labor and invest the money right in people. It should be expanded rather than contracted during an inflationary period."

But it still isn't enough. In family planning, he said, there are requests for 50 to 100 per cent more than is currently in the budget.

"The trouble is, the same damn thing is true of other programs. Look at the Job Corps," he said, waving a hand at a flag-studded map of the United States. "We could be spending much more money than we can. You've got to have programs that are large enough to get a quantitative as well as a qualitative result."

Not Big Enough

The programs passed by Congress won't be big enough to satisfy Shriver, but Gen. William Westmoreland doesn't get everything he wants either, to fight his own—and very competitive—war. But the consensus is that President Johnson has at last started to fight for his Urban Program on Capitol Hill and that Shriver will get his appropriation.

In addition, the Republicans have made their point, to a great extent, and have gotten much of the country-club thinking and talking out of their systems. The rat-control bill was defeated in the House amidst much levity—levity that was undoubtedly lost on a Harlem mother going to visit her child in a hospital ward where the child was sick and miserable and crying from the anti-rabies shots that are the rule in treating rat bites.

East Germany Bitter

By DONALD SHANOR
Chicago Daily News Foreign Service

BONN—East Germany is in the midst of one of its harshest propaganda campaigns against West Germany's new policy of trade and diplomatic relations with the Soviet bloc.

It is not the words but the deeds that worry West Germans. They are afraid the Communists are beginning a parallel campaign of arrest and harassment of West German citizens traveling in eastern Europe.

One West German, Mrs. Annemarie Berlig, was arrested in Hungary at the request of the East Germans and turned over to East German security agents.

Mrs. Berlig had fled East Germany in 1960. But Communist Chief Walter Ulbricht has ordered that refugees remain East German citizens. The East Germans used their extradition agreement with Hungary to obtain Mrs. Berlig's arrest on charges of espionage.

Ulbricht has similar agreements with the other bloc nations. He is in a position to use them to inhibit travel by West German businessmen and tourists as fast as Bonn's trade and diplomatic treaties open up these countries.

The East Germans apparently fear that Bonn's new policies will isolate them in eastern Europe, Hungary, Romania, and the other bloc countries.

Officials here do not believe that Romania will cooperate with the East German harassment tactics. It ignored Ulbricht's pleas earlier this year when it began diplomatic relations with Bonn.

As Foreign Minister Willy Brandt's successful visit to Bucharest showed, Romania is anxious to benefit all it can from the new ties.

But the situation in Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia may be different. Bonn concluded a trade pact with the Czechs this month and wants to re-establish its broken diplomatic relations with the Yugoslavs as soon as possible.

Unlike the agreement with Romania, the Czech treaty affords West Germans no diplomatic protection. And because of the 30 years of bad feelings between Czechoslovakia and Germany, dating from the Sudeten crisis, there may be many scores the Czechs will want to settle with individual German visitors.

Yugoslavia, according to some reports, has worked closely with Ulbricht's security agents for some time, and co-operated in the arrest of two Germans there last year.

The government announced over the weekend that 56 West Germans are presently in prisons in the east European countries. Four of them, including Mrs. Berlig, have been turned over to the East German authorities from other bloc nations, it said.

Neues Deutschland, the East German Communist newspaper, took notice of this:

Foreign tourists are always welcome in the Socialist countries when they observe the laws and sovereignty of these countries and do not let themselves be misled by imperialist secret services," it said.

What troubles the West Germans is that it is up to the Communists to decide who is a legitimate tourist and who is an imperialist agent.

The World Today

What Comes After the War?

By JAMES MARLOW
Ap News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—No-body says much about what comes after the war in Vietnam. But it looks grim. There's no need for guessing on one point: The Communists would take over instantly if the United States pulled out now. Assume it won't. The following is what the picture may look like if the United States stays until a settlement.

No one is predicting how long the war will last. Say at the end of another year, or two or three, the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese are badly beaten or beaten enough to agree to peace.

The North Vietnamese would have to withdraw behind their own frontier. That's for sure. The Viet Cong are another problem. Suppose it's the kind of peace that lets the Viet Cong take part in the negotiations.

That would be a problem in itself. It seems unlikely there would be any agreement letting them take part in the South Vietnamese government. That would be like turning a tiger loose.

They are organized, disciplined and dedicated to taking over the government. They would be dealing with the South Vietnamese who, even though they have had a government of sorts, are split into factions.

The splits would make it easier for the organized Viet Cong to assert themselves. This might take time. They have time. And the Viet Cong in the government would have plenty of help. The rest of the Viet Cong guerrillas, even with their guns stowed away, could stay in the South as part of the population and be in a prime position to dominate by persuasion and subversion even if they did no shooting.

If the Viet Cong are kept out of the government, but through a general amnesty are permitted to remain part of the population, they are still in a prime position for subversion. The United States would realize all this.

It would probably want to keep troops there for some time. There would be opposition at home. And the North Vietnamese have consistently insisted on American withdrawal.

Therefore, the United States might agree to a compromise: That it would keep troops in South Vietnam only a limited time until the government had achieved some stability. Even then Viet Cong subversion could continue.

But suppose everything turned out dandy: life in South Vietnam continues in an orderly way, there are legal elections, no revolts, and suppose then the United States eventually withdraws. Does that mean South Vietnam is safe?

Hardly. Unless the Viet Cong lose their dedication and the North Vietnamese their determination. The departure of the Americans would be an open door to a new try at a takeover, even though slowly at first.

New Problem Ahead

But by that time, say 10 years from now, there will be a new problem. Red China by then will have developed a nuclear arsenal and a missile system, capable of hitting all Asia, the Soviet Union, Europe and the United States.

When they have achieved that strength, judging by their past performance, the Red Chinese will be in a position to try to make Communist satellites of all their neighbors.

Then, it can be assumed, an attempt definitely will be made to capture South Vietnam. How? In one of several ways: pressure, subversion, a new attack from the North.

It doesn't seem reasonable to think any of the small Southeast Asian nations will try to resist Communism if by then U. S. forces have been withdrawn. Would the United States rush back into the defense of South Vietnam, once it was out of Southeast Asia and Red China was a nuclear power?

Perhaps not if it meant nuclear war with Red China. Perhaps this is the best American hope: that when the present fanatical Peking leadership dies or fades away a more moderate bunch of leaders, as in Moscow after Stalin, will emerge.

With them it might be easier to talk reasonable settlements. This hope is perhaps the best excuse for the present American involvement. If this sounds like a gloomy view, at least it's an attempt to be realistic.

Do you think the United States would let Red China move physically into the Western Hemisphere? You had the answer when President John F. Kennedy was ready to risk war with the Soviet Union in order to force its missiles out of Cuba.

Future Convention Review

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP) — If delegates to the State Constitutional Convention have their way, it will be at least a quarter of a century before another convention is called to review and revamp their work.

Under terms of a proposition adopted Tuesday, voters in New York State, some of them not even yet born, will be asked in 1992 to decide if they want another Constitutional Convention.

That provision was among a number of items the delegates acted on during a four-hour debate on a measure that would replace the present Constitution's Article 19 dealing with submission of proposed Constitutional amendments and selection of delegates to conventions of the future.

In most respects, neither procedure will vary to any great degree from the present Constitutional guidelines.

In order for an amendment to be presented to the voters it will still be necessary for two successive Legislatures to approve the proposed change in the state's basic document.

As originally reported, the proposition debated Tuesday would have permitted submission of an amendment if three-fourths of the Legislature voted favorably during just one session.

Proponents of that idea held that it would cut down on the amount of time required to gain final approval of a proposed constitutional change.

Delegate J. Irwin Shapiro, a State Supreme Court justice, moved successfully, however, to reject the proposal and retain the present provision requiring approval by two successive Legislatures.

His amendment was approved 108-58.

Efforts failed to restrict salary payments to no more than 18 months from the time the convention began and to set the time for asking the voters to decide on the next constitutional convention for 1982.

In the salary dispute, Delegate Leonard B. Sand, a Manhattan Democrat, argued that delegates to future conventions could become deadlocked, and, unless there was no limitation on how long they could collect payment, might remain on the payroll for years. Sand's proposal was defeated 76-80.

Another suggested change that would have barred judges, legislators and other public officers from serving as delegates was defeated after it evoked the ire of a State Supreme Court justice now serving as a delegate.

The proposal was submitted by Delegate Burton S. Cooper, R-New Rochelle, who asserted there was a danger that public officers could be suspected of conflict of interest if they served on the body charged with redrawing the state's basic charter.

He also noted that public officers continue to receive their regular salaries plus that of a delegate.

Justice Saul S. Streit angrily charged Cooper with undermining faith in the court system and said he was "tired of these despicable attacks" on judges.

Cooper called Streit's attack unwarranted and said he had offered the proposal not as a reflection on any judge or legislator serving in the present convention but as a guide for the future.

There are 19 judges from various courts throughout the state serving in the Convention. There are 13 legislators.

Other changes in the present

Constitution would establish a residency requirement of at least three years in the state, permit the convention president to cast a tie-breaking vote in filling a vacancy on the convention and allow the delegates to fill a seat if the regular election failed to produce a winner.

The new proposal was approved with only one dissenting vote.

Forest Fires Gain Ground on Firefighters

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Embattled fire crews were reported near exhaustion in the Northwest timber regions late Tuesday as they appeared to continue to lose ground to hundreds of blazes in all sections but Oregon, southern Idaho, and Washington.

However, a wind change in British Columbia and the hope of reinforcements in western Montana and northern Idaho brought expectations that significant progress may get under way.

In those areas, uncontrolled blazes were reported on an estimated 50,000 acres.

Washington State officials braced for possible fire outbreaks but reported their forests were still free of major blazes which have raged for nearly two weeks in other Northwest states.

In Oregon and southern Idaho, crews Tuesday contained major timber blazes burned over more than 30,000 acres. Oregon officials said all fires there were under control. All but a few minor, but potentially dangerous "hot spots" were reported controlled in southern Idaho.

"We're wearing out," Ted Thompson, Glacier National Park fire control officer said. "It's getting to be a matter of trying to last to the limit of our resources, and then figure out how to replace worn out crews."

About 5,000 acres of land in the Glacier Park region has been aflame for almost two weeks.

Weather conditions were expected to improve with fewer lightning storms and forecasts along the coastal regions indicated no storms were developing. Rain in the entire Northwest region generally comes from Pacific storm fronts.

Busy 'Dolly' Has No Time to Mope

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — The statue of Buddha in the Waldorf Towers apartment looked unreal. Half-hiding the placid timeless face was a large blonde wig, tilted askew.

"I'm waiting for the hairdresser to come and fix it," said Carol Channing.

Rare indeed is the actress who creates one unforgettable role in the theater. Carol did it twice, scoring as Lorelei Lee in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" in 1949 and as Dolly Gallagher Levi in "Hello, Dolly!" in 1963.

Miss Channing made musical comedy history by bringing in $17,015,018 in 1,272 consecutive performances of "Dolly" on Broadway and on the road. It was a personal triumph for her as well as a financial triumph for producer David Merrick.

So when Hollywood decided to film the musical, whom did the little role go to? To Barbra Streisand.

Good Trouper

The choice was a heavy blow to Carol, but she's too good a trouper to be bitter about it.

"Naturally, I was disappointed," she said. "But Barbra and I were always good friends. She's a creative person, and will do the role in her own way."

"It doesn't hurt me anymore. But I certainly did want to jump out the window at first."

But Carol has no immediate leisure for such nonproductive activities as defecation.

She has six hour-long spectacles to make for the ABC network. There are also two more films to do for producer Ross Hunter, for whom she costarred with Julie Andrews in "Thoroughly Modern Miller," another box-office hit.

Then, in 1970, she has a commitment to appear in another Broadway musical planned by Merrick. "No, I don't mind having my life planned so far ahead," said Carol.

"I like it. It's every actor's ambition to keep working. The busier anyone is the happier he is, and the more fun to be around."

"The only unhappy people are those who don't work, either because they don't have to or because they are bums."

Doll Eyes

This gal who has been called "the blitz blonde with the clown-doll eyes" has the air of a hoydenish kitten on stage. Off stage, she is just as warm and friendly, but her comic, flighty mannerisms are underlaid by a vein of seriousness. She is as wise as well as funny kitten.

She worked as a model, receptionist, and sales girl before achieving success. Today she values that success, and she values the happy family relationship she has with her husband and manager, Charles Franklin Lowe, and her son, Channing.

To her happiness consists "in keeping busy at the thing you are built to do."

"I believe you should find something to dedicate your life to—and then dedicate it, go all the way with it."

These are her likes:

Favorite Things

"Bicycling in Central Park with my husband and son—vivid colors such as chrome yellows, bright reds and strong magentas—working with Julie Andrews—rainy weather—Monday night audiences, because they're always the best—cooking omelettes with my son—wearing massive pieces of novelty jewelry—the writings of Thornton Wilder—any music with lyrics—swimming in the Pacific Ocean early in the morning—and painting portraits of people from the neck up with 10-cent pastel paints."

And these are her dislikes:

"Music without lyrics—getting stuck in elevators—alcoholic actors, because they can ruin your performance as well as their audience—and people who don't work at anything, and are therefore mean and resentful."

What does she think are her own worst faults?

"Being late to appointments, and dribbling food when I eat. Really, I should always wear an apron to the table."

New Romeo and Juliet Frightened About Future

By BOB THOMAS

ROME (AP) — Romeo recently turned 17 and speaks cockney. Juliet is 15 and addicted to mini-skirts and the Beatles. Both are somewhat frightened about the future.

Shakespearean directors have long been intrigued with casting the star-crossed lovers as the teen-agers they were supposed to have been. They had been dissuaded by the fact that such youthful performers would doubtless lack the skill to polish the luster of the language.

Now comes Franco Zeffirelli, the audacious Florentine to whom nothing seems impossible—the man who directed the Burtons in "Taming of the Shrew."

Back to Original

He abandoned the modern tradition of playing "Romeo and Juliet" with adult and sometimes middle-aged leads. He returned to the original conception—and as it was done in the musicalized version in "West Side Story"—of two teen-agers caught in an adult world of hate and strife. The new Romeo and Juliet were enjoying a few days' rest while the Montagues and Capulets battled under the Roman sun at CinéCitta studios. I found Romeo, Leonard Whitling of London, at a luxurious villa where several of the British actors are staying near the studio. He was wearing a full-length Arab robe, a gift from Zeffirelli.

Whitling is a slender 5 feet 8 with a straight, thin nose and limpid blue eyes. His dark-brown hair is a bit shorter than hippie-length.

"I did 'The Tempest' and one of the tragedies when I was in school," he said, "but otherwise I didn't have much contact with Shakespeare. I think kids get Shakespeare too early and they feel it is being shoved down their throats. I didn't like Shakespeare much before, but I'm beginning to like it now. I find it's not outdated. It's life."

Whitling started acting at 12 as the Artful Dodger in the London run of "Oliver!" He later played Jimmy the Dip in Disney's "The Legend of Young Dick Turpin." He was appearing in Laurence Olivier's "Love for Love" for the National Theater when he heard of auditions for "Romeo and Juliet."

What happens next?

"I guess I'll go back to my same life in London," he said. "I live with my parents (father is a store manager, mother a factory worker) and I'll continue to do what I can do after playing Romeo. I'm too young for most parts."

Juliet — English-Argentine Olivia Hussey — was staying at a stylish Rome hotel after returning from costume fitting in Florence. She has a tiny, sad face and dark-brown hair that streams to her waist.

More Experienced

She is even more experienced than her co-star, having appeared for two years in the London play, "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" (starring Vanessa Redgrave) and in two films, including "The Battle of the Villa Fiorita" with Maureen O'Hara and Rossano Brazzi.

"Oh, we had some Shakespeare in school — 'Macbeth,' 'Much Ado about Nothing' — but I always missed the classes," she said. Olivia too is getting accustomed to the poetic dialogue. She is also trying to adjust to all the attention she has been accorded. One of her recent experiences was being photographed by Lord Snowden.

"I giggled a lot," she admitted, "because I was so nervous about being photographed by him. You think people like that are going to be so different, but he turned out to be just an ordinary person. He was very nice."

She was born in Buenos Aires to an Argentine opera singer and an English mother. Her father died when she was 2, and she moved to London, where her mother works as a secretary.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Edward Schwartz, 24, of Scarsdale, N.Y., was elected president of the National Student Association on Tuesday.

He succeeds W. Eugene Groves Schwartz, a 1965 graduate of Oberlin College, served as national affairs vice president for the NSA during the past year.

"We're wearing out," Ted Thompson, Glacier National Park fire control officer said.

"It's getting to be a matter of trying to last to the limit of our resources, and then figure out how to replace worn out crews."

About 5,000 acres of land in lightning storms and forecasts along the coastal regions indicated no storms were developing. Rain in the entire Northwest region generally comes expected to improve with fewer from Pacific storm fronts.

DIVORCING—Cary Grant, the epitome of debonair charm on screen, was sued for divorce yesterday by his fourth wife, actress Dyan Cannon, 30, who charged the 63-year-old actor treated her in a "cruel and inhuman manner." The two are shown in a 1966 film photo with their daughter, Grant's only child, Jennifer. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

Busy 'Dolly' Has No Time to Mope

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — The statue of Buddha in the Waldorf Towers apartment looked unreal. Half-hiding the placid timeless face was a large blonde wig, tilted askew.

"I'm waiting for the hairdresser to come and fix it," said Carol Channing.

Rare indeed is the actress who creates one unforgettable role in the theater. Carol did it twice, scoring as Lorelei Lee in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" in 1949 and as Dolly Gallagher Levi in "Hello, Dolly!" in 1963.

Miss Channing made musical comedy history by bringing in $17,015,018 in 1,272 consecutive performances of "Dolly" on Broadway and on the road. It was a personal triumph for her as well as a financial triumph for producer David Merrick.

So when Hollywood decided to film the musical, whom did the title role go to? To Barbra Streisand.

Good Trouper

The choice was a heavy blow to Carol, but she's too good a trouper to be bitter about it.

"Naturally, I was disappointed," she said. "But Barbra and I were always good friends. She's a creative person, and will do the role in her own way."

"It doesn't hurt me anymore. But I certainly did want to jump out the window at first."

But Carol has no immediate leisure for such nonproductive activities as defenestration.

She has six hour-long spectacles to make for the ABC network. There are also two more films to do for producer Ross Hunter, for whom she costarred with Julie Andrews in "Thoroughly Modern Miller," another box-office hit.

Then, in 1970, she has a commitment to appear in another Broadway musical planned by Merrick. "No, I don't mind having my life planned so far ahead," said Carol.

"I like it. It's every actor's ambition to keep working. The busier anyone is the happier he is, and the more fun to be around."

"The only unhappy people are those who don't work, either because they don't have to or because they are bums."

Doll Eyes

This gal who has been called "the blitz blonde with the clown-doll eyes" has the air of a hoydenish kitten on stage. Off stage, she is just as warm and friendly, but her comic, flighty mannerisms are underlain by a vein of seriousness. She is a wise as well as funny kitten.

She worked as a model, receptionist, and sales girl before achieving success. Today she values that success, and she values the happy family relationship she has with her husband and manager, Charles Franklin Lowe, and her son, Channing.

To her happiness consists "in keeping busy at the thing you are built to do."

"I believe you should find something to dedicate your life to—and then dedicate it, go all the way with it."

These are her likes:

Favorite Things

"Bicycling in Central Park with my husband and son—vivid colors such as chrome yellows, bright reds and strong magentas—working with Julie Andrews—rainy weather—Monday night audiences, because they're always the best—cooking omelettes with my son—wearing massive pieces of novelty jewelry—the writings of Thornton Wilder—any music with lyrics—swimming in the Pacific Ocean early in the morning—and painting portraits of people from the neck up with 10-cent pastel paints."

And these are her dislikes:

"Music without lyrics—getting stuck in elevators—alcoholic actors, because they can ruin your performance as well as their audience—and people who don't work at anything, and are therefore mean and resentful."

What does she think are her own worst faults?

"Being late to appointments, and dribbling food when I eat. Really, I should always wear an apron to the table."

New Romeo and Juliet Frightened About Future

BY BOB THOMAS

ROME (AP) — Romeo recently turned 17 and speaks cockney. Juliet is 15 and addicted to mini-skirts and the Beatles. Both are somewhat frightened about the future.

Shakespearean directors have long been intrigued with casting the star-crossed lovers as the teen-agers they were supposed to have been. They had been dissatisfied by the fact that such youthful performers would doubtless lack the skill to polish the lustre of the language.

Now comes Franco Zeffirelli, the audacious Florentine to whom nothing seems impossible—the man who directed the Burtons in "Taming of the Shrew."

Back to Original

He abandoned the modern tradition of playing "Romeo and Juliet" with adult and sometimes middle-aged leads. He returned to the original conception—and as it was done in the musicalized version in "West Side Story"—of two teen-agers caught in an adult world of hate and strife. The new Romeo and Juliet were enjoying a few days' rest while the Montagues and Capulets battled under the Roman sun at Cinecitta studios. I found Romeo, Leonard Whiting, of London, at a luxurious villa where several of the British actors are staying near the studio. He was wearing a full-length Arab robe, a gift from Zeffirelli.

Whiting is a slender 5 feet 8, with a straight, thin nose and limpid blue eyes. His dark-brown hair is a bit shorter than hippie-length.

"I did 'The Tempest' and one of the tragedies when I was in school," he said, "but otherwise I didn't have much contact with Shakespeare. I think kids get Shakespeare too early and they feel it is being shoved down their throats. I didn't like Shakespeare much before, but I'm beginning to like it now. I find it's not outdated. It's life."

Whiting started acting at 12 as the Artful Dodger in the London run of "Oliver!" He later played Jimmy the Dip in Disney's "The Legend of Young Dick Turpin." He was appearing in Laurence Olivier's "Love for Love" for the National Theater when he heard of auditions for "Romeo and Juliet."

What happens next?

"I guess I'll go back to my same life in London," he said. "I live with my parents (father is a store manager, mother a factory worker) and I'll continue to go to school. I don't know what I can do after playing Romeo. I'm too young for most parts."

Juliet — English-Argentine Olivia Hussey — was staying at a stylish Rome hotel after returning from costume fitting in Florence. She has a tiny, sad face and dark-brown hair that streams to her waist.

More Experienced

She is even more experienced than her co-star, having appeared for two years in the London play, "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" (starring Vanessa Redgrave) and in two films, including "The Battle of the Villa Fiorita" with Maureen O'Hara and Rossano Brazzi.

"Oh, we had some Shakespeare in school — 'Macbeth,' 'Much Ado about Nothing' — but I always missed the classes," she said. Olivia too is getting accustomed to the poetic dialogue. She is also trying to adjust to all the attention she has been accorded. One of her recent experiences was being photographed by Lord Snowden.

"I giggled a lot," she admitted, "because I was so nervous about being photographed by him. You think people like that are going to be so different, but he turned out to be just an ordinary person. He was very nice."

She was born in Buenos Aires to an Argentine opera singer and an English mother. Her father died when she was 2, and she moved to London, where her mother works as a secretary.

Anti-Semitism --- Is It ---

number of residents — probably teenagers.

Rabbi Joel Aaron told a reporter "a few hundred" prayer books and some prayer shawls were damaged. He said shawls and his robe were taken off the wall, some were ripped, and all were piled on the floor of the Temple. The articles were taken from the Holy altar and a closet.

Rabbi Aaron doubts it was the work of children. He believes teenagers were responsible. He noted that Jewish religious articles were taken from a showcase and thrown on the floor. Asked if in his opinion the incidents involved anti-Semitism, Rabbi Aaron replied, "it is hard to tell at this time."

Rabbi Aaron said the synagogue was entered twice. He saw rays of a flashlight inside the temple. He notified state troopers, who responded in moments. Whoever was inside the building, got away. They apparently had seen Rabbi Aaron's car outside.

Senior BCI Investigator Charles Teelon told a reporter his investigation had disclosed no indication of anti-Semitism involved in the synagogue and center burglaries, or in the incidents at Camp Aishel at Spring Glen or Camp Sunrise at Ulster Heights.

No Pattern or Design

Teelon said he saw no pattern or design in any of the burglaries, which he said were typical burglaries committed by someone who evidently was looking for money. Teelon noted that his investigation to date had not produced anything that had been destroyed. "I don't feel that we have any anti-Semitism in the area," he said.

Commenting on the removal of books from a case in the synagogue, Teelon estimated that about 10 per cent of the books were pulled out and dropped on the floor.

Alex J. Nirenberg, chairman of the Anti-Defamation League said thorough investigation is being made by ADL of recent incidents at the synagogue and Center and the two area camps.

Nothing Organized

Nirenberg said he had been told that small groups of young boys have been heard discussing anti-Semitism "but nothing appears formalized or organized." The ADL chairman noted that not only the synagogue had been burglarized, but said the Catholic and Methodist churches also had been entered in recent months.

"That," Nirenberg said, "would tend to indicate there is no anti-Semitism on a large scale." In his opinion the recent trouble was immature vandalism by young kids.

Mayor Eugene Glusker of Ellenville commenting on the synagogue and Center entries, might lead one to suspect anti-Semitism might be involved. He doesn't think anti-Semitism has become prevalent in the area, and he feels that the opened cabinets, pulled out religious Israeli articles and scattered them around.

Herbert Poppel, a Town of Wawarsing justice of the peace and member of the synagogue executive committee, said at the request of the committee he personally contacted District Attorney Joseph P. Torraca, who was on vacation, and the county prosecutor said he would investigate conditions in the area immediately.

Satisfied With Progress

Poppel said he was "satisfied with the progress" being made by the district attorney and BCI Investigator Teelon, who has been on the case since the burglaries and camp incidents. Poppel said he believes the entries and damage was the work of "smart-alec kids with long hair."

The committee member noted that he has resided in Ellenville "all my life" and said he has found all residents good people and friendly neighbors. "I could walk in any home in the valley and have dinner," he said.

Harold Lipton, Temple president, told a reporter that the break-in at the synagogue last week was the second in three weeks. The first time, two or three Bibles were burned on the floor, he said, and the first apparently "smoldered out."

Lipton said last Wednesday, whoever went into the Temple opened cabinets, pulled out religious Israeli articles and scattered them around.

After troopers were called by Rabbi Aaron, Lipton said, he and Rabbi Aaron went into the Temple with the troopers and found articles of clothing and religious items piled on the floor with stacks of books that had been taken from a case. "We found a pair of dark-rimmed eyeglasses in a ladies' pew," Lipton said. "Two cigaret butts were on the floor."

A second entry was made later on the morning of Aug. 9 and this time someone picked up the eyeglasses and left. Those responsible for the entry also pried open a showcase and took the religious articles, but left them on the floor. A small sum of money was taken.

Several Questioned

"If these incidents continue," Lipton said, "it might be reasonable to assume that it could be anti-Semitic." Persons interviewed conceded they don't suspect any organized anti-Semitism in the area.

Investigator Teelon said several persons have been questioned in connection with the investigation of the burglaries. He reported two boys—12 and 13—had been picked up in connection with a recent burglary at the Napanoch Methodist Church, the Elks club and three unoccupied buildings including the Old Dutch Reformed Church parsonage.

Marshall Plan Urged for Slums

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a Negro congressman urged a $30 billion attack on urban slums, the mayor of riot-racked Newark told a presidential panel a crash program of big-city improvement projects is needed to stave off further uprisings.

Rep. John Conyers Jr., Negro Democrat from Detroit, drew loud applause from 1,000 delegates to the AFL-CIO American Federation of Teachers convention when he said urban slums—and not South Vietnam—should be America's prime concern.

He warned that Negroes are angry enough to attempt to destroy America.

The nation's resources should be directed to solving the plight of slumdwellers "rather than trying to bring democracy to a nation 10,000 miles away that wouldn't understand the word if we gave it to them in Vietnamese."

Newark Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio meanwhile told the President's Commission on Civil Disorders, currently probing this summer's rash of riots, that "a staggering effort—yes, a Marshall Plan" is needed in housing, education, crime control and related fields.

That echoed the earlier call by civil rights leaders for an all-out urban aid effort patterned after the post-World War II Marshall Plan that helped rebuild Europe.

The commander of federal troops sent into the Detroit rioting drew sharp fire meanwhile when he told a House Armed Services subcommittee that National Guardsmen there were "inexperienced, nervous, trigger-happy soldiers."

The assessment by Lt. Gen. John L. Throckmorton came after subcommittee members criticized him for issuing an order that no soldier could fire without specific authorization of company commanders.

Throckmorton's deputy, Maj. Gen. Charles P. Stone, told the panel that his personal survey of 500 Guardsmen on duty in Detroit indicated 90 per cent disobeyed orders to keep their weapons unloaded.

ATHENS (AP) — The first mass trial of political opponents of Greece's military government opened before a military tribunal today. Thirty-seven defendants faced charges arising from the printing and circulation of a leaflet attacking the regime.

The defendants are accused of entering property of two Ellenville area religious camps at

For Lions Speaker Details Ghetto Problem

Kingston Lions Club, at its regular weekly meeting Tuesday at Governor Clinton Hotel, heard an informative talk by Samuel H. Grant on the problems of the Negro adolescent in the ghetto.

Grant is presently at IBM in Kingston on a temporary summer appointment from his regular position at Lincoln University, Oxford, Pa., as a personnel counselor and placement director. He also acts as a consultant to the Federal Civil Service Commission.

The talk centered around the raising of the Negro's level of expectation so he can look forward to a satisfying career in business and live in comfort and security that many other Americans now enjoy but the Negro does not due to the environment in the ghetto, and lack of academic and vocational training.

Grant elaborating on the defeatist attitude of the ghetto Negro. The Negro never really had the opportunities other Americans had for adapting themselves to the industrial life in the United States, he said. They were always given menial jobs and never allowed to progress into skilled labor or management. Consequently, the Negro never really expected to attain any worthwhile goals in life that he might set for himself. The jobs necessary for the Negro to hold in order to be able to afford his desires were not available. The economic development of the Negro did not match the pace of his white brethren leaving the Negro with low paying jobs and poor living conditions, he said.

Grant stressed that by raising the Negro's level of expectation he will reach out for good education thereby placing himself in a position to fulfill his wants and needs. The responsibilities of this rests with the educational system as well as industry who will show the Negro that once he has obtained an education he will be hired. Once the Negro is hired and has an equal place in society then he can be expected to make a significant contribution to society.

Missing Boy Found Dead in Elmira Area

ELMIRA, N.Y. (AP) — A 13-year-old boy, missing from his home in nearby Breesport since Dec. 10, was found dead Tuesday in brush about eight miles from here.

State Public Works Department employees clearing the brush along Route 223 discovered the body of James F. Tryon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Grover.

There was no immediate indication of the cause of death. Police said the boy had been reported seen walking along Route 223, apparently enroute home, at the time of his disappearance.

Rap Brown Freed in $15,000 Bail

NEW YORK (AP) — H. Rap Brown was free today after having his bail on a federal gun charge reduced from $25,000 to $15,000 in a noisy hearing before U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Murphy.

The 23-year-old chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee walked out of the federal House of Detention at 5:20 p.m. Tuesday.

He immediately returned to the Foley Square Courthouse where the hearings had taken place and told a crowd of some 150 of his supporters: "Justice is a joke in America."

Brown, arrested on a federal charge of carrying a gun across state lines while under indictment, said: "If Lyndon Johnson think I'm going to pay $25,000 to get out of jail, he's crazy. He wouldn't pay that much for Lady Bird."

He added, "If he (Johnson) is worried about my rifle wait until I get my atom bomb."

Twice during the afternoon hearing Judge Murphy left the bench until the noisy courtroom crowd could be brought to order. The first time two of Brown's aides were forcibly ejected.

When Brown, wearing a blue pinstripe blazer and dungarees, entered the room he was greeted by wild applause and repeated shouts of "Black Power Black Power!" Murphy again left the room.

While the New York proceedings were under way, a federal grand jury in New Orleans indicted Brown on charges that he carried a 30-caliber carbine across state lines while under indictment—a federal crime punishable by a maximum five years in prison.

The two-count indictment charged Brown flew from New York to New Orleans with the carbine Aug. 16 and returned with it two days later. He is under indictment in Maryland on charges of arson and inciting a riot in Cambridge.

The bond in New York was aimed at insuring his appearance Friday on a scheduled hearing on his removal to New Orleans.

Would Bomb Red China Only In Intervention

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—Retired Army Gen. Mark Clark says he advocates bombing Red China bases only if the Communist country intervenes in the Vietnam war as it did in Korea.

Clark, who makes his home in Charleston, said Tuesday night he had been misquoted concerning a speech he made earlier in the week to the 68th national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at New Orleans.

Clark, in an interview with the Charleston News and Courier, denied published reports that he said the United States should bomb Red China now.

He was quoted as saying Monday, "The time to act against China is now, because if they develop their nuclear capabilities, we'll have more headaches."

Rap Brown Freed in $15,000 Bail

NEW YORK (AP)—H. Rap Brown was free today after having his bail on a federal gun charge reduced from $25,000 to $15,000 in a noisy hearing before U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Murphy.

The 23-year-old chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee walked out of the federal House of Detention at 5:20 p.m. Tuesday.

He immediately returned to the Foley Square Courthouse where the hearings had taken place and told a crowd of some 150 of his supporters: "Justice is a joke in America."

Brown, arrested on a federal charge of carrying a gun across state lines while under indictment, said: "If Lyndon Johnson think I'm going to pay $25,000 to get out of jail, he's crazy. He wouldn't pay that much for Lady Bird."

He added, "If he (Johnson) is worried about my rifle wait until I get my atom bomb."

Twice during the afternoon hearing Judge Murphy left the bench until the noisy courtroom crowd could be brought to order. The first time two of Brown's aides were forcibly ejected.

When Brown, wearing a blue pinstripe blazer and dungarees, entered the room he was greeted by wild applause and repeated shouts of "Black Power! Black Power!" Murphy again left the room.

While the New York proceedings were under way, a federal grand jury in New Orleans indicted Brown on charges that he carried a .30-caliber carbine across state lines while under indictment—a federal crime punishable by a maximum five years in prison.

The two-count indictment charged Brown flew from New York to New Orleans with the carbine Aug. 16 and returned with it two days later. He is under indictment in Maryland on charges of arson and inciting a riot in Cambridge.

The bond in New York was aimed at insuring his appearance Friday on a scheduled hearing on his removal to New Orleans.

Those Black Bears Can Be Hostile, Too

BY HOWARD CLARK

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Several thousand black bears roam the mountains of New York State and each one is potentially as dangerous as a grizzly, warns one of the state's top conservationists.

Dr. E. L. Cheatum, director of the Fish and Game Division of the State Conservation Department, commented nine days after two grizzly bears fatally mauled two girls in Glacier National Park in Montana. One bear also seriously injured the male companion of one of the girls. Park rangers subsequently shot four bears.

Can Be Treacherous
The largest black bear caught in New York State weighed 600 pounds, in comparison to the usual 300 to 1,000 pounds of a grizzly, Cheatum said. "But it can be just as treacherous — especially when someone gets between the bear and its cubs."

"Their reaction to people is primarily a defense response," he said. "But when a bear is cornered, you've got a big problem on your hands."

Cheatum said there have been no reports in the state in recent years of bears attacking people. Usually they are shy, wary, and try to stay away, he said. "It is only in the interest of feeding, say at a dump, that they become tolerant of people."

The Conservation Department has an education program to teach respect of bears but "the doggone people don't obey it," Cheatum said. "They go to dumps to take pictures and take all kinds of chances. People can be very foolish."

Leg Bitten

Several years ago, a chased bear in a dump bit the leg of a man who tried to kick it. Rangers had to track down and kill the bear because the physician feared the animal had rabies, he proved negative.

Cheatum said that bears can be nuisances around cabins and dumps where they smell food.

They are particularly hated by the state's beekeepers, he said, because the bears damage hives to obtain honey. Nuisance cases usually are shot with tranquilizer guns and transported to other areas of the state.

The state is trapping and tagging bears to learn more about the animal's habits, movements, birthrate and feeding, he said. Hunters are offered a $25 reward for each skull they turn in, along with information about where the bear was bagged.

"Bears are doing quite well" in the state, Cheatum said, and are in no danger of extinction. Occasionally their overabundance prompts the Conservation Department to declare a special hunting season.

600 Killed Yearly

Cheatum said about 600 bears are taken in the state each year, most of them incidental to deer hunting.

The state's black bears usually roam over a distance of about 15 or 20 miles, Cheatum said. They are found in the Adirondacks and in some counties of the Southern Tier.

Birth Control To Get No Aid From Medicaid

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Welfare officials throughout the state were on notice today from Atty. Gen. Louis J. Lefkowitz that they are not to use Medicaid money to pay for sterilizations if the purpose is birth control.

Lefkowitz said Monday that the Medicaid law permitted use of public funds for sterilizations only if the purpose is to cure disease or correct a medical disorder.

George K. Wyman, the state commissioner of social services, and Dr. Hollis S. Ingraham, the state health commissioner, had solicited Lefkowitz's interpretation of the 1966 law that put the medical-assistance program into effect.

Wyman told The Associated Press that the question arose because a previous attorney general had held in 1934 — in the absence of clear instructions from the Legislature — that state funds could not be used for birth-control sterilizations. Wyman said the question did not arise because someone sought an operation.

Lefkowitz said the Legislature, in the 1966 law, still had not given such authorization.

Lefkowitz wrote that the Medicaid law "furnishes ample authority" for sterilizations "as an incident to recognized surgical procedures...I do not believe, however, that the law...is broad enough to include sterilization procedures for purely contraceptive purposes within the program."

The state's chief legal officer said Medicaid "was enacted to enable those in need of medical assistance to lead normal, healthy lives. It cannot be said that sterility, artificially produced when no pathology exists, is a normal condition within the meaning and intent" of the law.

Lefkowitz advised the department heads that the law gives them authority "to establish standards to insure that public monies will not be expended to defray the cost of operations which are purely contraceptive in nature."

Intensification of Bombing Praised by High Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — Intensification of U. S. bombing of North Vietnam is accompanied by escalating military praise about how much the strikes are hurting the enemy.

The generals and admirals are sounding a recurring theme in recent statements before Congress and to newsmen: Bomb more while North Vietnam suffers.

Their comments, coming as American planes knife more often near Hanoi and along the Red Chinese border, indicate the brunt of the air campaign may be shifting from southern areas of North Vietnam to the heavily defended politically sensitive northeast quadrant.

The northeast area, which includes the vital railroad link with Communist China's weapons and munitions factories, is regarded as Hanoi's main base area for the war in South Vietnam.

In Saigon Tuesday Air Force spokesmen said the stepped-up attacks in the northeast are severely hurting North Vietnam's capacity for war, and a high-ranking officer declared: "Hammer, hammer, hammer with everything you can because you know it hurts them. I know they're beaten. The question is: When are they going to quit?"

Meanwhile Gen. John P. McConnell, Air Force chief of staff, told the Senate Preparedness subcommittee examining the bombing campaign: "The cumulative effect of this increasing pressure by air has brought us to the point where we have begun to hurt the enemy in his home territory."

One week ago, Army Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was telling the same group the raids have resulted in "steady destruction of the country's physical infrastructure and deterioration of the national economy."

And on Aug. 9, Adm. Ulysses S. G. Sharp, Pacific commander in chief, testified before the subcommittee: "During the last three months, with an expanded target list but no significant departure from the broad restraints under which we have long operated, we have begun to hurt the enemy in his home territory."

Officers say the latest raids near Hanoi reflect a policy decision to hammer harder at the important northeast sector, which contains key elements of the transportation system, industrial facilities and major military complexes such as training bases.

McConnell traced the evolution of the bombing campaign for senators Tuesday and asserted that without it the United States might have needed an additional 800,000 troops to cope with the Communist buildup.

The four-star general also gave a rare, official picture of what the attacks are doing to North Vietnam as a country, saying its economy "has undergone a decided change."

Due to damaged production and transportation facilities, export tonnage has dropped steadily since air strikes began in 1965, he said.

"Coal exports have been cut in half and phosphate exports have virtually ceased," McConnell stated. "Cement which was exported is now imported, and pig iron production capability has in effect been eliminated."

Impression on Israel Visit:

Mideast May Never Be the Same

BY LYNN HEINZERLING

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — You can't visit Israel after her great military triumph without feeling that the Middle East will never be the same again.

The impression comes not alone from the devastating blow this nation of 2½ million struck against the Arab enemies, but also from the vital, determined society evolving in this 19-year-old country.

A new generation born on Israeli soil is coming forward to take the place of tired immigrants. These are the Sabras, named after the fruit of the cactus, apparently to denote a tough, prickly exterior and a warm, soft heart. They are eager and confident and this is the only home they know.

Gen. Moshe Dayan, defense minister, and Labor Minister Yigal Allon are the only Sabras in the present Israeli Cabinet.

Both look like possibilities for the post of premier. The top army officers and many of the soldiers are Sabras. They are prominent in Israel's advanced scientific community, in industry, the trade union movement, the theater and the arts.

More than 40 per cent of Israel's population was born in the country.

This is a different kind of Jew, robust, toughened on the Israeli kibbutzim and trained to defend his homeland with modern weapons. When the fighting is over he returns to his desk, his farm or his machine to build Israel.

Although they refuse at present even to consider peace with Israel, the Arab countries, by the magnitude of their defeat and the strategic advantages they have surrendered, must eventually negotiate or fight again.

The Israelis view their victory as an opportunity to achieve some measure of the security they have lacked on their frontiers with four Arab states.

There is no intention here to keep Israeli troops permanently entrenched in the sandbanks along the Suez Canal. But there is also no intention to return to the prewar situation in which Israel was excluded from use of the canal, in violation of international agreements, according to the Israeli view.

In its conquest of Jerusalem, Israel is adamant. The city has been unified, Israel has promised that the holy places will be protected and respected under the supervision of the churches involved, and there is no intention to restore the barbed wire and bunkers which once separated Arab and Jew.

Israelis express no doubt that they can live at peace with the 70,000 Arabs in the city despite a one-day strike by merchants recently and the distribution of pamphlets urging noncooperation with Israeli authorities. The city already is operating as a unit, they say, and the army and police are prepared to keep it that way.

'Lulus' May Survive the Albany Parley

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The much-criticized "lulu" system of compensating state and local government officials for on-the-job expenses apparently is going to survive the Constitutional Convention.

An attempt was made in the convention Monday to do away with "lulus" in favor of reimbursing public servants for "actual and necessary" expenses. It was defeated on a voice vote, after a show of hands indicated that the convention was overwhelmingly opposed to any change.

"Lulu" is government jargon for a lump-sum payment "in lieu of" having to make a detailed accounting of expenses.

Members of the Legislature now draw $3,000 "lulus" annually. Judges and other state and local government officials also are paid lump-sum allowances ranging up to the $17,000 "lulu" accorded to the lieutenant governor.

Earlier in the convention, the delegates approved a new article on powers and functions of the Legislature that, among other things, would abolish the legislative "lulu" and substitute a system of reimbursement for actual expenses for state lawmakers.

This incurred the ire of Delegate John J. Marchi, a Staten Island Republican who also serves as a state senator. Marchi vowed to press for abolishment of "lulus" at all levels of government.

Marchi made his move Monday, offering an anti-lulu amendment to a proposed new article dealing with civil service regulations.

Members of the Democratic majority contended that the matter was one for the Legislature to decide, while Republicans protested that it would tend to mandate expenditures on local governments that they might not be prepared to assume.

Marchi's argument that, what was good for members of the Legislature also would be fitting for other public servants, fell on deaf ears.

STAFFORD, Kan. (AP) — Clyeth Shusky of Stafford was at a loss to understand why his combine overheated whenever he took it out to cut his wheat crop. He decided to dismantle the radiator on the vehicle to seek the cause of the trouble. He found a bird's nest full of hard-boiled eggs which had stopped the water from circulating through the radiator.

Intensification of Bombing Praised by High Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — Intensification of U. S. bombing of North Vietnam is accompanied by escalating military praise about how much the strikes are hurting the enemy.

The generals and admirals are sounding a recurring theme in recent statements before Congress and to newsmen: Bomb more while North Vietnam suffers.

Their comments, coming as American planes knife more often near Hanoi and along the Red Chinese border, indicate the brunt of the air campaign may be shifting from southern areas of North Vietnam to the heavily defended politically sensitive northeast quadrant.

The northeast area, which includes the vital railroad link with Communist China's weapons and munitions factories, is regarded as Hanoi's main base area for the war in South Vietnam.

In Saigon Tuesday Air Force spokesmen said the stepped-up attacks in the northeast are severely hurting North Vietnam's capacity for war, and a high-ranking officer declared: "Hammer, hammer, hammer with everything you can because you know it hurts them. I know they're beaten. The question is: When are they going to quit?"

Meanwhile Gen. John P. McConnell, Air Force chief of staff, told the Senate Preparedness subcommittee examining the bombing campaign: "The cumulative effect of this increasing pressure by air has brought us to the point where we have begun to hurt the enemy in his home territory."

One week ago, Army Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was telling the same group the raids have resulted in "steady destruction of the country's physical infrastructure and deterioration of the national economy."

And on Aug. 9, Adm. Ulysses S. G. Sharp, Pacific commander in chief, testified before the subcommittee: "During the last three months, with an expanded target list but no significant departure from the broad restraints under which we have long operated, we have begun to hurt the enemy in his home territory."

Officers say the latest raids near Hanoi reflect a policy

decision to hammer harder at the important northeast sector, which contains key elements of the transportation system, industrial facilities and major military complexes such as training bases.

McConnell traced the evolution of the bombing campaign for senators Tuesday and asserted that without it the United States might have needed an additional 800,000 troops to cope with the Communist buildup.

The four-star general also gave a rare, official picture of what the attacks are doing to North Vietnam as a country, saying its economy "has undergone a decided change."

Due to damaged production and transportation facilities, export tonnage has dropped steadily since air strikes began in 1965, he said.

"Coal exports have been cut in half and phosphate exports have virtually ceased," McConnell stated. "Cement which was exported is now imported, and pig iron production capability has in effect been eliminated."

Impression on Israel Visit:

Mideast May Never Be the Same

By LYNN HEINZERLING

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — You can't visit Israel after her great military triumph without feeling that the Middle East will never be the same again.

The impression comes not alone from the devastating blow this nation of 2½ million struck against the Arab enemies, but also from the vital, determined society evolving in this 19-year-old country.

A new generation born on Israeli soil is coming forward to take the place of tired immigrants. These are the Sabras, named after the fruit of the cactus, apparently to denote a tough, prickly exterior and a warm, soft heart. They are eager and confident and this is the only home they know.

Gen. Moshe Dayan, defense

minister, and Labor Minister Yigal Allon are the only Sabras in the present Israeli Cabinet.

Both look like possibilities for the post of premier.

The top army officers and many of the soldiers are Sabras. They are prominent in Israel's advanced scientific community, in industry, the trade union movement, the theater and the arts.

More than 40 per cent of Israel's population was born in the country.

This is a different kind of Jew, robust, toughened on the Israeli kibbutzim and trained to defend his homeland with modern weapons. When the fighting is over he returns to his desk, his farm or his machine to build Israel.

Although they refuse at present even to consider peace with Israel, the Arab countries, by the magnitude of their defeat and the strategic advantages they have surrendered, must eventually negotiate or fight again.

The Israelis view their victory as an opportunity to achieve some measure of the security they have lacked on their frontiers with four Arab states.

There is no intention here to keep Israeli troops permanently entrenched in the sandbanks along the Suez Canal. But there is also no intention to return to the prewar situation in which Israel was excluded from use of the canal, in violation of international agreements, according to the Israeli view.

In its conquest of Jerusalem, Israel is adamant. The city has been unified, Israel has promised that the holy places will be protected and respected under the supervision of the churches involved, and there is no intention to restore the barbed wire and bunkers which once separated Arab and Jew.

Israelis express no doubt that they can live at peace with the 70,000 Arabs in the city despite a one-day strike by merchants recently and the distribution of pamphlets urging noncooperation with Israeli authorities. The city already is operating as a unit, they say, and the army and police are prepared to keep it that way.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING....

by ROGER E. SPEAR

Investment Advisor & Analyst Build Cash Reserves If Earning Power Is Cut

Q "We are deeply concerned about our financial situation. We are both 47 years old. Our income has been $30,000 a year and could be severely cut temporarily. Should this situation continue do you have any suggestions as to our financial situation as shown on attached list?" N.L.

A) I am very sorry that you are faced with an abrupt change in earning power in your middle years. With regard to your stock list, you seem well situated with little cause for alarm. You have no poor stocks and indeed, no very doubtful ones. It may be that since you are facing a period of uncertainty your concern would be lessened by building up your cash reserves to a point where an intermediate price decline would not seriously disturb you.

You are well represented in electronics and I would hold Lear Siegler; TRW; Bell & Howell; and sell Mallory, which I consider your least impressive holding here. In your situation I would dispose of Waddell & Reed, a good mutual fund sponsor which might be hurt if a proposal to regulate fees is carried out. I would get out of Monsanto which has gone nowhere since 1959.

I like Consolidated Foods and Texaco but your commitment in each case is heavily disproportionate. I would reduce these holdings to 500 shares and 200 shares respectively. If you made these sales I believe your cash position would render you impregnable for some time ahead.

Q) "I have an elderly friend who is alone and has no occupation or business capacity. She has enough money to invest in an annuity which would bring her $500 a month for life. She has savings of $9,000. Would she be safer taking the annuity route rather than investments with which she is not familiar?" C.L.

A) Yes. Her only risk with an annuity is that continued inflation may some day lessen her buying power. I'm afraid that she will just have to accept that risk.

DAs of Area Schedule Tapes On Penal Law

District Attorney Joseph P. Torracca of Ulster County has announced that his office, in conjunction with District Attorneys Angelo Ingrassia of Orange County, John Heilman of Dutchess County and Robert Williams of Sullivan County, has scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 30, at 10 a. m., a presentation of the New York City Police Department tapes on the new Penal Law.

Torracca said his office was extending an invitation to all justices of the peace of Ulster County, town constables, deputy sheriffs, New York State Police and all police departments in the county to attend.

Chief Abe Rand of the Village of Ellenville Police Department is in charge of arrangements. Torracca said a series of lectures and discussions will be held concerning each tape.

The program will be presented next Wednesday at the Nevele Hotel, Ellenville, commencing at 10 a. m. It is suggested that all interested persons immediately contact Chief Rand of the Ellenville police department.

Provisions of the new Penal Law will be gone into thoroughly at the session.

Raids Uncover Bronx Arsenal

NEW YORK (AP) — An arsenal of ammunition and weapons, including antitank and sub-machine guns, was seized in The Bronx during the night in a series of raids which led to the arrest of four men, it was learned today.

Detectives said the raids were part of an investigation stemming from a bomb explosion last June at the Alton Social Club in The Bronx.

The raids reportedly netted 250,000 rounds of ammunition, 50 rifles, sub-machine and anti-tank guns, cans of black powder, dynamite and wire, it was learned.

The raids were made on several private homes, two restaurants and a sporting-goods store.

Urban Leaguers Conclude Today

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Dozens of action proposals, some Black Power-oriented and many going far beyond present programs, face the National Urban League as it winds up its four-day annual conference.

A delegate assembly, the league's highest policy making body, is scheduled to spend today sifting through recommendations submitted by regional workshops Tuesday, the first day Black Power became an open issue among the estimated 1,400 delegates.

Concern about riots was very much in evidence as the Midwest region recommended as a major concern "the positive use of conflict, how we can best use it."

Hurley Board

The regular monthly meeting of the Town of Hurley Board will be held at the Hurley Firehouse Aug. 28 at 8 p. m.

Financial and Commercial

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market resumed its decline early Wednesday in moderately active dealings. Losses outnumbered gains by a fairly narrow margin of around 6 to 5.

The Dow Jones industrial average was down more than 3 points.

A generally lower trend prevailed among autos, steels, rubbers, mail order-retails, aerospace issues, chemicals, utilities and building materials.

Most changes were fractional. Among wider movements, M-G-M dropped a couple of points following news of the big deal in the company's stock.

Down a point or so were IBM, and Colt Industries.

Ling-Temco-Vought picked up a couple of points.

High Voltage Engineering and American Cyanamid were active fractional losers.

Mobil Oil took an early lead in volume, trading on blocks of 300,000 and 6,000 shares off 1 at 40, preceded by a block of 10,000 shares at 41.

Opening blocks included: American Telephone, unchanged at 51 1/2 on 12,000 shares; American Motors, off 3/4 at 13 1/2 on 10,000; and General Motors, off 1/4 at 83 1/2 on 4,500.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks Tuesday lost 2.0 at 333.6.

Automakers See Exceptional Fall

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In Detroit, where the seasons refer to automobiles as much as to the weather, the telltale signs of fall are fast approaching. In one nine-day period between September 14 and September 22 the nation's Big Four automakers will begin selling their new models, but already the tension is building with preview showings. This isn't going to be an ordinary season.

To begin with, seldom have the automakers planned a season with as much care. Having suffered two long and difficult years they are determined to make this an exceptional one.

To condition themselves for the new season they began model changeovers earlier than in most years, and their introduction of the 1968 models is scheduled to be the earliest in the past few years.

Meet Safety Rules

They have also cleared the road to one of the biggest obstacles to sales, the safety problem. Most automakers now have met the safety standards demanded by federal authorities.

The advertisements are prepared and mailed. The promotional hoopla is all cleared for use. The new models are clanging from production lines. The dealers are standing smugly confident beside the new canvas shrouded models. And millions of customers are ready to make deals.

The one thing that sends a chill down the fastback of the industry is the possibility of a strike, a very real possibility this year against at least one of the big three—General Motors, Chrysler, Ford.

Negotiations for a new contract are now under way, but a strike deadline of Sept. 6 is approaching fast.

Barring a strike, the experts say sales could exceed nine million cars, imports included. This would be an improvement of about 500,000 cars, but the domestic makers might get a larger share of this increase at the expense of imports. These are the plus factors that automakers count on to lift sales.

Dealer inventories of old cars are lower than they were at this time a year ago. There is less of a backlog of 1967 models to be sold off.

Safety features, the absence of which might have caused some customers to postpone buying 1967 models, are installed on most of this year's cars. For the time being, that problem is licked.

Foreign Rivals

Foreign competition in the U.S. market might not be as severe this year because some foreign makers are finding it more expensive to adapt to the new safety standards.

People are loaded with cash this year, having saved as much as 6.5 per cent of their take home pay through much of the year. This is a very high rate and leaves potential customers very capable of buying.

The clouds in the new season include higher prices, perhaps about $100 to $150 a car; the lack of marked model changes; the threat of an income surtax; and the subtraction from customer lists of those who bought late 1967 models to avoid price increases.

It is debatable, of course, as to whether the number of customers who have delayed purchases cancels out, exceeds or falls short of the number who bought early to beat price increases.

Extra excitement this year is added by the comeback attempt

American Pygmy

American is by most measures one of the largest companies in America. But measured against the Big Three automotive giants—GM, Ford, Chrysler—it is a pygmy.

Measured in profits, American is less than small. In the nine months that ended June 30 the company reported losses of $42.7 million.

It hopes that by increasing sales to 300,000 cars from 250,000—by enlarging its share of the market to nearly 4 per cent from 3 per cent—it can turn this loss to a profit.

And so the new season begins, accompanied by school days, World Series, football games, falling leaves and new cars. Excitement is in the air.

Meany Backs Tax Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Meany of the AFL-CIO backed President Johnson's request for an income tax hike today, but said Congress should give family incomes a break and double the increase on corporations.

"We are fully in accord with the President's concept that a temporary war tax is needed," Meany said.

Recognition

But, he added, "we are firmly opposed to the administration's major recommendations on how to increase taxes."

His remarks were prepared for testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee.

Johnson's proposal would impose an across-the-board 10 per cent income tax surcharge on both corporations and individuals to help pay for the war in Vietnam.

Meany said any cutback in spending on vital domestic programs would be disastrous because forward strides on the homefront are essential to the preservation of our free society.

"America has the human and material resources to achieve both an honorable settlement of the war in Vietnam and a strengthened social order at home," said Meany, a strong backer of Johnson's war policies.

No Extension

But he urged a stiffer tax on those he said are most able to pay the tax.

"Tax loopholes of special privilege for wealthy families and corporations are numerous and notorious," he said.

Highlights of Area Scouts' Trip to New Mexico Listed

Thirteen older Scouts and Explorers of the Rip Van Winkle Council, Boy Scouts of America, returned home recently from a "High Adventure Trek" to the Philmont Scout Ranch located near Cimarron, N.M. The 1967 Philmont Expedition was led by Roy Sears, Explorer Advisor of Post 70, Highland.

Following is a personal account of highlights of the trip prepared by Expedition Leader Roy Sears:

"On Monday, July 24, at 6:43 p. m., our contingent of 13 Scouts and Explorers from the Rip Van Winkle Council boarded a New York Central train at Rhinecliff bound for high adventure at the Philmont Scout Ranch in Cimarron, N.M. We arrived in Chicago at 9:40 a. m. on July 25 and after placing our gear in lockers, we had lunch in a nice restaurant where reservations had been made by a Burlington Railroad representative. We then went on a tour of Chicago which included a visit to the Museum of Science and Industry, which we found very interesting.

After our tour of Chicago, we boarded the Denver Zephyr for Colorado. We arrived in Denver at 8:45 a. m., mountain time and took a tour of the mile high city. The city is very beautiful with rugged mountains for a background and is very neat and clean. Shoving off on a chartered Trailways Silver Eagle bus, we headed for Philmont about 240 miles away. We stopped at the Old Colony Restaurant for a huge buffet lunch and were joined by a troop of Scouts from Ohio for the remainder of our journey. The boys enjoyed the new company and were soon very much at home with each other.

Campfire Swapping. We arrived at Philmont Scout Ranch at 5:30 p. m. and were immediately assigned tents and a fine, young Ranger by the name of Mike Boone from Illinois. Next we went to chow at the mess hall for a roast beef dinner. That evening was spent by the boys, sitting around the campfire, swapping kerchiefs and patches while I was getting the paperwork for the trail in order.

Bright and early next morning we all had our physicals and group pictures taken. Boone then had us line up in front of our tents and drop the contents of our packs onto ground cloths. We then went through a systematic elimination process to get rid of extra weight for the trail. We ate lunch at the mess hall and boarded a bus to our starting point.

After unloading our gear we headed for our first camp on the trail. It was very warm and after an hour and a half and much puffing, we arrived at Harlan camp. We set up our tents and dining fly, just in time, as the sky became cloudy and the thunder rattled and then came the rain. This afternoon's rainstorm seems to be a pattern and we had it for six days of the 10 days on the trail.

Tired, Hungry

The next morning was spent building a fire, eating, getting our trail food and attending a map and compass course. Afternoon found our little group doggedly heading up trail to Bench camp. We arrived tired and hungry and again set up camp. We met a group from Missouri and throughout our trip we crossed each other's paths. They were a fine group with two excellent leaders.

The third day out we climbed to the so-called Cimarronito camp. Here we were able to take our first showers and wash out our clothes. Here also we met our first bears. I was awakened during the night by a very pungent odor. Looking up at our tent flap, I looked directly into the face of a very large black bear. Needless to say, the rest of the night was sleepless for me. The following day two bears ambled into the camp and the boys got some real close up pictures of them. That evening a large group of Scouts chased a bear through our encampment and the boys missed a lot of sleep.

The fifth day out we hiked to Sawmill camp where we joined two other outfits and together had a conservation lecture and then a Chuck Wagon supper. The boys did a fine job of cooking chuck wagon stew, biscuits and peach cobbler. The cooking was done completely in Dutch ovens over an open fire. The sixth day we climbed our highest mountain, 10,729 feet. The scenery on the trail was spectacular and pictures were taken by all. We camped at an old abandoned mine, called Cyphers Mine. Many artifacts still remain and are enjoyed by the campers.

Bears Again

We traveled from Cyphers Mine to Clarks Ford camp on the eighth day and again were plagued by bears. Supper almost went to the bear as he was very determined. However, the boys were even more determined and we finally managed to chase the bear away with much shouting, whistling and banging of pans. We were not alone too long however, as the bear sneaked in behind the boys at the campfire and proceeded to lick the dishes without the boys' knowledge. That is until Robert Hoppenstedt heard a slurping noise and turned to investigate. Upon seeing the bear Bob cleared the campfire in one leap. We all had a hearty laugh over that.

Our most arduous day came when we had to climb Shaefers Pass to get to Miner's Park Camp. The pass is almost straight up with no switchbacks and climbs 1800 feet in a mile and a quarter. We had to rest often to get our wind. Topping the ridge we found a nice trail camp in the pines and decided to spend the night. We got camp set up just before the rain and ate our supper. Everyone was so tired that we hit the sack at 7 p. m. and slept through until 6 a. m. We then hiked the rest of the way to Miner's Park Camp. This camp is well staffed and lies out in a meadow amid tall Ponderosa Pines. The boys finished their conservation work at this camp and were eligible for the 50 mile award which includes, not only hiking 50 miles but doing 10 hours of conservation on the trail.

Our last day was spent at the stockade camp where a real stockade stands in the shadow of the "Tooth of Time" Mountain. We climbed "the tooth" early on our last day and could see for miles and miles in all directions. The climb was made without packs and was very tiring as it is almost a vertical climb of 2,000 feet.

We returned to base camp at 11:30 Sunday, August 6 and it really looked great to us. The boys at a monstrous lunch of four cheeseburgers, from two to four pieces of cake plus French fried potatoes, salad and gallons of soft drinks.

We left Philmont at 9 a. m. on the seventh day of August and proceeded to Fort Carson by chartered bus, where we spent the night. We also took in a movie at the Fort. The Army provided us with excellent food and good clean barracks. A tour of Pikes Peak climaxed a thrilling tour of Colorado Springs. Then a chuck wagon lunch was provided by the Burlington railroad. We left Denver, Colo., at 4 p. m. aboard the Denver Zephyr and arrived at Poughkeepsie at approximately 8:25 a. m. Thursday, Aug. 10, where the boys were met by their parents.

Bobby Favors Fairer System On Tax Plans

NEW YORK (AP) — A proposed federal tax increase would "fall most heavily on those wage earners who can least afford it," Sen. Robert F. Kennedy said today.

At the same time, he said, the U.S. tax system "lets many of our wealthiest escape their share of the burden."

"We must build a system which is fair to all, and will thereby provide us the resources we need for the tasks ahead," the New York Democrat added.

In a review of various domestic and international issues, Kennedy said of Vietnam, "We do not seem to know how we came to a war of this breadth or the way to bring it to an honorable end."

4-Hers Head for Fair

Ulster County will be represented at the New York State Fair at Syracuse again this year. Many County 4-H members will exhibit in the youth activities area of the annual State Fair being held this year, Aug. 29 through Sept. 4.

The 4-H members selected to compete were chosen on a competitive basis. These members have shown their ability either by presenting an outstanding performance at the Ulster County Fair Aug. 11 through 13 or on the basis of contests held throughout the spring and summer. Selection to represent Ulster County at State Fair is an honor for 4-H members and a goal for which they strive throughout 4-H work.

Home Economics

Many Ulster County 4-Hers exhibited in the home economics area at the Ulster County Fair. Seventy-seven girls participated in the annual fashion show held Saturday night at the bandstand.

This year about 50 girls will exhibit in the home economics area at the State Fair at Syracuse. Every exhibit entered in state competition was a blue award winner at county fair.

Six of these girls will compete in person at Syracuse. Susan Schoonmaker, High Falls and Dolores Hoffer, Hurley will participate in the 4-H Dress Revue. Sorting Car Losing Ground

WASHINGTON (AP) — The railroad mail sorting car, once a key to America's postal system, is losing ground to Mr. Zip despite efforts of congressmen and postal workers to preserve it.

Once, railway mail cars were in use on 10,000 trains in all parts of the nation. Clerks sorted mail as the trains rolled along. Now, the number of cars is down to 800—a drop of about 2,500 in less than 15 years.

Soon, partly in conjunction with the Post Office Department's zone improvement plan, called Zip for short, even more of the cars are to be abandoned.

Twenty-four mail-sorting cars are to be taken off runs between Chicago and Portland, Ore., alone in September.

Under the zone improvement plan, mail is shipped in bulk by the fastest means available—air, rail or highway—among 552 sectional sorting centers around the country.

Beginning Sept. 16, most first class mail moving east or west among a number of major cities will travel in bulk shipments by air instead of by rail. Officials say they hope to get letters to their destinations 24 hours sooner.

Among the cities to be included in the first class mail airlift are New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Seattle, Portland and Los Angeles.

All other classes of mail, including parcel post, will continue to move on trains. And, the Post Office says the sorting cars are being eliminated only on runs on which studies have shown that the mail can be moved and delivered faster in bulk.

Removal of the sorting cars without more study is opposed by some congressmen who say they still are the most efficient method for distributing mail to sparsely populated areas.

Elimination of the cars has been opposed for two years by the United Federation of Postal Clerks, which says they still are the most efficient sorting method for cities as well as rural areas.

Evacuate 6,000 From Tex. City

TEXARKANA, Tex. (AP) — Fires and explosions swept four derailed chemical cars of a freight train Tuesday night and early today, forcing the evacuation of 6,000 persons as a precaution against poison chemicals and gas.

Police said nine cars were derailed, and four were afire. One car was loaded with what the Department of Public Safety called "a highly explosive chemical." Another contained nitric acid, another liquid plastic and gas, one fertilizer, and at least two held naphtha.

At 4:45 a.m. Richard Kennedy, desk sergeant, said, "We've got the fires pretty well contained. That smoke is toxic, but so far we haven't had any injury. We've been real lucky."

The evacuation of the residents from a 1½-mile area was orderly. Civil Defense workers and policemen helped move residents from the area to three school gymnasiums for the night.

The Red Cross sent a unit from Dallas to help feed those evacuated.

The cause of the derailment on the grounds of the International Creosote plant was not immediately known.

"A Friend in Need"

"Compassion in Action" perhaps best sums up the work of The Salvation Army. Begun by William Booth in the impoverished East End of London in 1865, The Salvation Army sought to meet not only the spiritual, but the physical, emotional and social needs of those to whom it ministered. Booth knew a man wouldn't think about his spiritual need until his physical needs had been met, and so The Salvation Army became famous for its "Soup, Soap and Salvation". Motivated by love for God and man, Booth and the officers and soldiers of the Salvation Army put their religion into action, establishing spiritual centers, men's rehabilitation centers, homes for unwed mothers, children's shelters, soup kitchens, and any other service that could help to meet a need. As the Salvation Army spread to other countries, other fields were opened. Schools for the blind and the crippled, hospitals, tuberculosis sanitariums, leprosariums — all were included in the Army's program. Today The Salvation Army carries on these activities in over eighty-six countries of the world.

The Salvation Army came to the United States in 1880 and following its slogan "With heart to God and hand to man", it opened up its activities and soon spread throughout the country. Although the Salvation Army faced a great deal of persecution and opposition during its first years in this country, its services to people, especially to the soldiers during World War I, won the love and respect of the American people. Everywhere The Salvation Army went, it sought to meet a need. Corps where the spiritual, recreational and welfare activities took place, were established. Men's Social Service Centers took second-hand furniture and clothing to start rebuilding the lives of the alcoholic, the ex-convict, the ex-drug addict or the "down-and-out." Food, clothing, shelter, learning a trade, plus sound spiritual counseling and a "family" to belong to, helped to change lives. Homes for unwed mothers, day-nurseries, hospitals, youth centers, Golden Age clubs,—all these sought to meet a need at the point of need. Today the work continues. Whether it be running a residence for young business women, or opening a half-way house for drug addicts, from the jungles of Vietnam to the streets of your home town, service continues to be a part of The Salvation Army's "Compassion in Action."

Singer Style Contest Ending

Singer Company Style Contest ends this week for 160 teenage girls who finish their dresses for entry in the gala fashion show to be held Friday, Aug. 25 at 8 p. m. in the George Washington school auditorium.
These girls have had a busy summer—beside adding to their fall wardrobe they have gained priceless knowledge in selecting fabrics and patterns, alterations, cutting and construction details.
The girls putting the final touches to their creations are in three groups: 10 to 12 years of age, 13 to 15 years of age, and 16 to 18 years.
On Friday night it will be decided which girl in each age group has won a portable record player. They are automatically entered in the Rochester regional contest at which time the winners get "touch and sew" sewing machines as prizes and another chance in New York City for the grand awards, trips abroad and scholarships.
It is hoped that one or more of the young ladies will bring home to Kingston this great honor.

We care

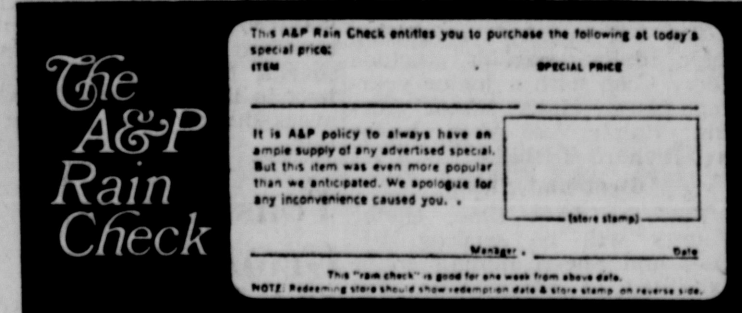

We never "run out" on a sale!

We never advertise a special sale item unless we have an ample supply. Once in a great while, the special is more popular than we imagined. So occasionally, we do run out of the item.

But we never "run out" on a sale.

If the item is sold out, just ask the manager for a "RAIN CHECK".

An A&P Rain Check is a certificate that entitles you to buy the item at the same special price, the following week.

We think that's the fair thing to do. We think that shows "WE CARE".

Not every store can care that much. A&P can...and does.

Shouldn't A&P be your store?

Singer Style Contest Ending

Singer Company Style Contest ends this week for 160 teenage girls who finish their dresses for entry in the gala fashion show to be held Friday, Aug. 25 at 8 p. m. in the George Washington school auditorium.

These girls have had a busy summer—beside adding to their fall wardrobe they have gained priceless knowledge in selecting fabrics and patterns, alterations, cutting and construction details.

The girls putting the final touches to their creations are in three groups: 10 to 12 years of age, 13 to 15 years of age, and 16 to 18 years.

On Friday night it will be decided which girl in each age group has won a portable record player. They are automatically entered in the Rochester regional contest at which time the winners get "touch and sew" sewing machines as prizes and another chance in New York City for the grand awards, trips abroad and scholarships.

It is hoped that one or more of the young ladies will bring home to Kingston this great honor.

Soviets Show Progress in Tartar --- Still Dreary, Dirty

KAZAN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — "Please don't write anything bad about us," a local Communist official urged.

He was acknowledging his embarrassment at a series of awkward moments during the first official visit of foreign correspondents to Kazan, an ancient Volga River city closed to outsiders until last year.

An American journalist was told he could walk freely through Kazan and talk with the people. He started to chat with high school students as they strolled down a street. A Communist youth official cruised along behind them in a car, listened in and occasionally jumped out to inject his own comments into the conversation.

Tries Four Times

The official tried four times to make the correspondent return to his hotel—he claimed the youths did not want to talk to the American, although they gave him flowers and even asked for his autograph.

At last the official organized the students into singing what he called a "farewell song," then escorted the American back to the hotel.

Next day the youth official was reprimanded by a Moscow woman accompanying the guests.

The visitors were told that the culture of the area's Tartars enjoys wide respect among the dominant Russians.

Taken to a concert, the foreigners heard Russian youths in the audience groan when a few Tartar-language songs were sung. They laughed at the songs and talked loudly during the performance. Some walked out.

A visit to this capital of the Russian Federation's oil-rich Tartar Republic was organized by Soviet officials to show progress made by the area, once considered the most backward in the Soviet Union.

The visitors were impressed by evidence of social and economic progress, such as efforts to wipe out illiteracy and the building of the area into the Soviet Union's No. 1 oil producer.

But, after 50 years of communism, Kazan's main thoroughfare, Bauman Street, retains the dreary, dirty appearance of its image in prerevolutionary photographs at the local museum.

There is a magnificent opera house in the city of 900,000 but few other new buildings. Horses and carts deliver goods to run-down stores. Only blocks from the center of town women carry buckets of water home from corner pumps.

One high school student, asked why this city only 450 miles east of Moscow was closed so long to foreigners, pointed to a crumbling building. "That's why," he said. "They didn't want you to see things like that."

Best and Worst

Outsiders see evidence of the best and worst of Communist policy toward ethnic minorities—long a sore point in Soviet history.

The Volga Tartars, a handsome people going back to the 13th century Mongol invasion and speaking a language related to Turkish, make up just under half the population. Russians, whose ancestors date back to the 16th century conquest by Ivan the Terrible also form nearly half the population. The rest are smaller minorities such as the Chuvash people.

Premier Gumer I. Usmanov, a Tartar, tells visitors that Tartar and Russian cultures exist side by side, with mutual respect and equal opportunities to develop.

"There are no differences," he says.

A middle-aged Tartar worker told a different story. "Before the Communist revolution we had many more Tartar-language newspapers, magazines and books," he said.

"Our languages used to be written in Latin letters. When the Russians changed it to fit their Cyrillic alphabet it meant the loss of two Tartar sounds, that the Russians couldn't pronounce."

"Everything here is Russian. The Russians look at you and they say, 'Oh, him. He's just a Tartar.'"

This man, whose wife is Russian, insists on sending their two children to a Tartar-language school, even though it means a long trip each day.

A newspaper's listing of plays and movies in Kazan did not mention any in the Tartar language.

Despite the roughly 50-50 division of the population between Tartars and Russians in the 3-million-strong republic, Tartar students at Kazan University make up only one-third of the enrollment. This represents progress, however. Before World War II only 17.2 per cent were Tartars.

Tartars and Russians often intermarry, and there is evidence of integration in the army, schools, jobs and housing.

Yet there is no question which culture dominates.

The Tartars traditionally are Moslems but the 400,000 in Kazan are served by one mosque.

a green-and-white 18th century structure in the dilapidated old part of town, other mosques have been turned into museums. One former church is a shoe store.

Soviets Show Progress in Tartar --- Still Dreary, Dirty

KAZAN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — "Please don't write anything bad about us," a local Communist official urged.

He was acknowledging his embarrassment at a series of awkward moments during the first official visit of foreign correspondents to Kazan, an ancient Volga River city closed to outsiders until last year.

An American journalist was told he could walk freely through Kazan and talk with the people. He started to chat with high school students as they strolled down a street. A Communist youth official cruised along behind them in a car, listened in and occasionally jumped out to inject his own comments into the conversation.

Singer Goes

NEW YORK (AP) — Demolition work has started on the 47-story Singer Building—the world's tallest building for a short time after its completion on lower Broadway in 1910. It is one of several buildings being cleared for a new 50-story tower.

Tries Four Times

The official tried four times to make the correspondent return to his hotel—he claimed the youths did not want to talk to the American, although they gave him flowers and even asked for his autograph.

At last the official organized the students into singing what he called a "farewell song," then escorted the American back to the hotel.

Next day the youth official was reprimanded by a Moscow woman accompanying the guests.

The visitors were told that the culture of the area's Tatars enjoys wide respect among the dominant Russians.

Taken to a concert, the foreigners heard Russian youths in the audience groan when a few Tartar-language songs were sung. They laughed at the songs and talked loudly during the performance. Some walked out.

A visit to this capital of the Russian Federation's oil-rich Tartar Republic was organized by Soviet officials to show progress made by the area, once considered the most backward in the Soviet Union.

The visitors were impressed by evidence of social and economic progress, such as efforts to wipe out illiteracy and the building of the area into the Soviet Union's No. 1 oil producer.

But, after 50 years of communism, Kazan's main thoroughfare, Bauman Street, retains the dreary, dirty appearance of its image in prerevolutionary photographs at the local museum.

There is a magnificent opera house in the city of 900,000 but few other new buildings. Horses and carts deliver goods to run-down stores. Only blocks from the center of town women carry buckets of water home from corner pumps.

One high school student, asked why this city only 450 miles east of Moscow was closed so long to foreigners, pointed to a crumbling building. "That's why," he said. "They didn't want you to see things like that."

Best and Worst

Outsiders see evidence of the best and worst of Communist policy toward ethnic minorities—long a sore point in Soviet history.

The Volga Tartars, a handsome people going back to the 13th century Mongol invasion and speaking a language related to Turkish, make up just under half the population. Russians whose ancestors date back to the 16th century conquest by Ivan the Terrible also form nearly half the population. The rest are smaller minorities such as the Chuvash people.

Premier Gumer I. Usmanov, a Tartar, tells visitors that Tartar and Russian cultures exist side by side, with mutual respect and equal opportunities to develop.

"There are no differences," he says.

A middle-aged Tartar worker told a different story.

"Before the Communist revolution we had many more Tartar-language newspapers, magazines and books," he said. "Our languages used to be written in Latin letters. When the Russians changed it to fit their Cyrillic alphabet it meant the loss of two Tartar sounds, that the Russians couldn't pronounce."

"Everything here is Russian. The Russians look at you and they say, 'Oh, him. He's just a Tartar.'"

This man, whose wife is Russian, insists on sending their two children to a Tartar-language school, even though it means a long trip each day.

A newspaper's listing of plays and movies in Kazan did not mention any in the Tartar language.

Despite the roughly 50-50 division of the population between Tartars and Russians in the 3-million-strong republic, Tartar students at Kazan University make up only one-third of the enrollment. This represents progress, however. Before World War II only 17.2 per cent were Tartars.

Tartars and Russians often intermarry, and there is evidence of integration in the army, schools, jobs and housing.

Yet there is no question which culture dominates.

The Tartars traditionally are Moslems but the 400,000 in Kazan are served by one mosque.

Three at Knox

Three area privates are currently undergoing rigorous training at the U. S. Army training center in Fort Knox, Ky., as part of a program to teach the men the fundamental skills of the soldier.

James R. Krembrenk, son of Alfred Hopper of High Falls, David G. Horton, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Horton reside in Port Ewen, and Ronald J. D. Benedetto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Giorano D. Benedetto live in Rifton, will spend the next two months firing live ammunition under simulated combat conditions, learning protective measures and first-aid for chemical, biological and radiological attacks, as well as being schooled in the use of modern arms.

This will be interspersed with constant emphasis on proper physical training, diet, rest, and health habits.

The men will receive at least an additional eight weeks of either advanced instruction on-the-job training to qualify them in a specialized military skill.

Murphy Recruit

Marine Private Kyle E. Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry P. Murphy of 148 Spring Street, Tillson, is going through recruit training at Parris Island, S. C. Recruit Depot.

His first stop when he arrived there was the depot's receiving barracks where all new recruits are processed. Here he received his first issue of Marine uniforms, the equipment he will use in training, and his first military haircut.

After being placed in a training platoon with other new recruits, he left the receiving barracks and began his formal Marine training under the close guidance of his Drill Instructors, or "D.I.'s." Until he graduates, eight weeks after he entered "boot camp," these seasoned Non-Commissioned Marines will guide and supervise his progress in physical conditioning and development, rifle marksmanship, and other skills which he must master to be a Marine.

MRS. STEVE K. KAZSEK

Reilly-Kazsek Nuptials Announced

Miss Sandra Ruth Reilly, daughter of Mrs. Leona Hunt Reilly of 50 Ulster Avenue, Saugerties, N. Y., wed Steve K. Kazsek of Saugerties, on Sunday, Aug. 6, 1967 at 2 p.m. ceremony in the First Congregational Church, Saugerties.

Officiating clergyman was the Rev. Frederick Imhoff and Mrs. John Harris was organist.

The bridegroom is the son of Karl Kazsek of Hungary and he resided with Mr. and Mrs. William Quinn in Mt. Marion, N. Y.

Godfather Charles Walker, the bride wore a white organza gown styled with fitted bodice, long tapered sleeves and full skirt of lace.

The gown was styled with a chapel length train and a princess crown of lace and pearls held a double tier of French imported silk illusion. She carried a white prayer book with stephanotis and a white orchid.

Elizabeth Dahl, Kingston resident, was matron of honor for her sister. She wore a modified sheath gown with a bodice of maize Saki and white skirt. The waistline was encircled with daisy braid. A crown of white and yellow daisies held a flirtation veil and she carried a basket of white and yellow daisies.

Judith Whitaker of Saugerties and Sharon Quinn of Saugerties were the attendants in gowns styled identically to that worn by the bride. They carried baskets of white daisies and their headpieces consisted of white daisies also.

Sheila Every, the bride's niece, was the flower girl in a similar gown. Her princess basket contained white and yellow daisies.

Clarence Dahl of Kingston was best man. Ushering were Paul Quinn of Saugerties and Robert Hunt of Wawarsing, N. Y.

A reception for 100 guests was given at the Mt. Marion Inn after the church ceremony. The bride is a graduate of Saugerties High School and is employed at Caldor's.

When Mr. and Mrs. Kazsek return from a wedding trip to Lake George, they will reside at 124 Livingston Street, Saugerties.

Oral Diseases: Problem Is Non-Patient

Women are more conscientious than men about taking care of their teeth, dentists have noticed. And their fastidiousness has finally begun to pay dividends.

When the American Dental Association made a survey in 1952, it found that women had more cavities than men but suffered less from gum disease. By 1965—the year of the Association's most recent survey—both sexes had about the same amount of tooth decay, men still had more gum disease, and nearly 25 percent more of the men than the women wore complete dentures.

Teeth and Pregnancy

Research has demolished a "truism" that women must resign themselves to losing "a tooth for every child." This turns out to be a slander against pregnancy. Extensive, scientific studies comparing pregnant and non-pregnant women show that there is no direct connection between child-bearing and tooth decay.

But there may be an indirect, avoidable connection. Dr. Howard Taylor, chief obstetrician at Cleveland Clinic Foundation Hospital, suggests that the diet of some pregnant women may be at fault, particularly the peculiar eating habits and food cravings of the early months of pregnancy.

Moreover, when women subject to attacks of nausea substitute irregular snacks for regular meals, they are also following a regime conducive to increased decay; the more frequently you eat, the more likely you are to develop cavities.

Although pregnancy has been exonerated as a decay-producer, it is now known that pregnancy does induce inflammation of the gums, or gingivitis, a condition that also occurs during menstruation. Believed to be a response to the hormonal changes that take place during these periods, gingivitis disappears by itself once the child is born.

Pregnancy and dental care do not mix well. Ideally, you should attend to all your dental problems before you actually become pregnant. This may take a bit of advance planning but it is highly advisable. If you do visit your dentist after becoming pregnant, be sure to tell him of your condition so that he will cover your stomach with a lead apron before taking an x-ray. General anesthesia can also endanger the unborn baby.

Fluorides Prove Valuable

Today's children should grow up with far healthier mouths than their parents, primarily as a result of the proven value of fluorides in reducing decay. Comprehensive studies covering several decades have shown that adding one part per million of fluoride to a community's water supply reduces decay among children by 50 to 60 percent. "Topical" fluorides, applied to the surface of the tooth in the form of a solution, a gel, a pumice, or in toothpaste, are also highly effective.

Although fluoride therapy has been regarded as particularly valuable to children, it now appears that young adults can benefit too. A triple-agent stannous fluoride treatment, used in the U.S. Army and Navy, has produced dramatic cuts in tooth decay. Regarded as the most advanced form of preventive dentistry available, this treatment consists of cleaning the teeth with a stannous fluoride paste and then applying a stannous fluoride solution to the surface of the teeth. This is reinforced with daily brushing with a stannous fluoride toothpaste.

Phosphates as well as other forms of fluorides are also being tested for use in toothpastes, chewing gums, and mouthwashes. Promising results are reported for a clear plastic which, when applied twice a year to the teeth of a group of schoolchildren, reduced cavities by 87 percent.

The real pot of gold at the end of the dental research rainbow would be a vaccine to immunize everyone against tooth decay. So far, this is still a dream, but the dream has a realistic foundation. Scientists have found that tooth decay in animals is an infectious, transmissible disease caused by streptococci.

Filling Materials

The ideal filling material has still not been found. Silver amalgam is the most popular but gold foil, powdered gold and silicates are also used. The goal, which Dr. Ralph Phillips of the University of Indiana believes will be reached in the next few years, is to find a synthetic material that will adhere to the tooth structure and prevent any leakage around fillings.

One of the important changes in recent years is a shift in emphasis: from eradicating decay as quickly as possible toward saving teeth even at a considerable cost in time, labor and money. That is why root canal work has assumed such importance. Teeth in which the nerves were infected used to be doomed to extraction. Now the injured or dead nerve is tediously removed, the root canal is filled, and the tooth remains in place.

When extraction is unavoidable, porcelain-fused-to-metal is widely used. It looks better and lasts longer than plastic teeth.

Some dentists have developed a technique for transplanting a tooth from one part of a patient's mouth to another part where it may be more needed. Dr. Ralph Mezzrow, of the Albert Einstein Medical Center in Philadelphia, uses teeth from a "tooth bank" to fill gaps. Unfortunately, "foreign" teeth are usually rejected sooner or later.

Cowardice A Major Problem

The Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital, which does a great many dental operations, says 90 percent of such patients frankly admit they cannot bear the thought of being conscious during the ordeal. The other ten percent include busy housewives who cannot spare the time for a long-drawn-out series of visits to a dentist.

Where is there most room for improvement in American dentistry? Probably among the patients. Or rather, the non-patients. Almost one-third of the nation never goes to a dentist except for an emergency extraction. Half the children under 15 have never seen a dentist. Only a little more than 40 percent of the population have their teeth checked annually.

A Commission on the Survey of Dentistry calls the extent of oral disease "appalling." The Commission estimates that there are on the average nearly four unfilled cavities for every man, woman and child in the country. That may be an understatement. At the Great Lakes Naval Training Station north of Chicago, dentists find an average of seven open cavities in the mouth of each recruit!

The Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital, which does a great many dental operations, says 90 percent of such patients frankly admit they cannot bear the thought of being conscious during the ordeal. The other ten percent include busy housewives who cannot spare the time for a long-drawn-out series of visits to a dentist.

Where is there most room for improvement in American dentistry? Probably among the patients. Or rather, the non-patients. Almost one-third of the nation never goes to a dentist except for an emergency extraction. Half the children under 15 have never seen a dentist. Only a little more than 40 percent of the population have their teeth checked annually.

A Commission on the Survey of Dentistry calls the extent of oral disease "appalling." The Commission estimates that there are on the average nearly four unfilled cavities for every man, woman and child in the country. That may be an understatement. At the Great Lakes Naval Training Station north of Chicago, dentists find an average of seven open cavities in the mouth of each recruit!

Fresh Fruits for Luscious Desserts

Now is the time to translate summer's wealth of fresh fruits into a luscious dessert. Here's a combination as attractive to serve as it is convenient to prepare.

Choose fruit flavor-partners picked at their peak of ripeness—peaches and blueberries, peaches and strawberries, green grapes and nectarines, for example. Combine with brown-sugar-sweetened sour cream and heap into freshly baked patty shell nects. Garnish with additional fresh berries or slices, sun-bright and inviting to the eye as well as the taste.

You'll love the patty shell cups because they may be made ahead, and their old-world richness and flavor bring elegance to your table. Their butter-layered dough, folded and refolded before it reaches the freezer, rises to magnificent heights when it bakes in your oven. Making puff pastry is something only the most courageous women brave in their own kitchens. And why should they when these frozen delights are virtually foolproof, besides saving hours of work?

Flaky patty shells serve as the base for year-round desserts. Once the harvest is past, try the following recipe with canned drained fruit cocktail with canned mandarin oranges and pineapple, or with a combination of frozen fruits.

Harvest Fruit Delight

- 1 package frozen patty shells
- 1 cup fresh blueberries
- 1 cup sliced peaches
- 1 cup sour cream
- 2 tablespoons light brown sugar

Prepare frozen patty shells according to package directions. Combine sour cream and brown sugar. Add fruits, reserving some for garnish. Just before serving, pile high into patty shells. Serves 6.

Performing Arts Day at Pioneer Youth Camp Nearby

A Performing Arts Day will be held at Pioneer Youth Camp on Sunday, Aug. 27 from 4 to 7 p.m. It was announced this week by Jerome Denman, Director of Camping Service for Goddard-Riverside Community Center and Mrs. Alexandra Padwa of Woodstock, who is Creative Arts Director.

The program includes readings from Shakespeare by Mr. Harris Yulin of the New York City Shakespeare Festival and Miss Penny Fuller who is a member of the cast of the Broadway hit "Cabaret." A Jazz Concert with Dollar Brand, the famous South African pianist-composer; Morris Goldberg, clarinetist and alto-saxophonist; and Gail Scott, cellist.

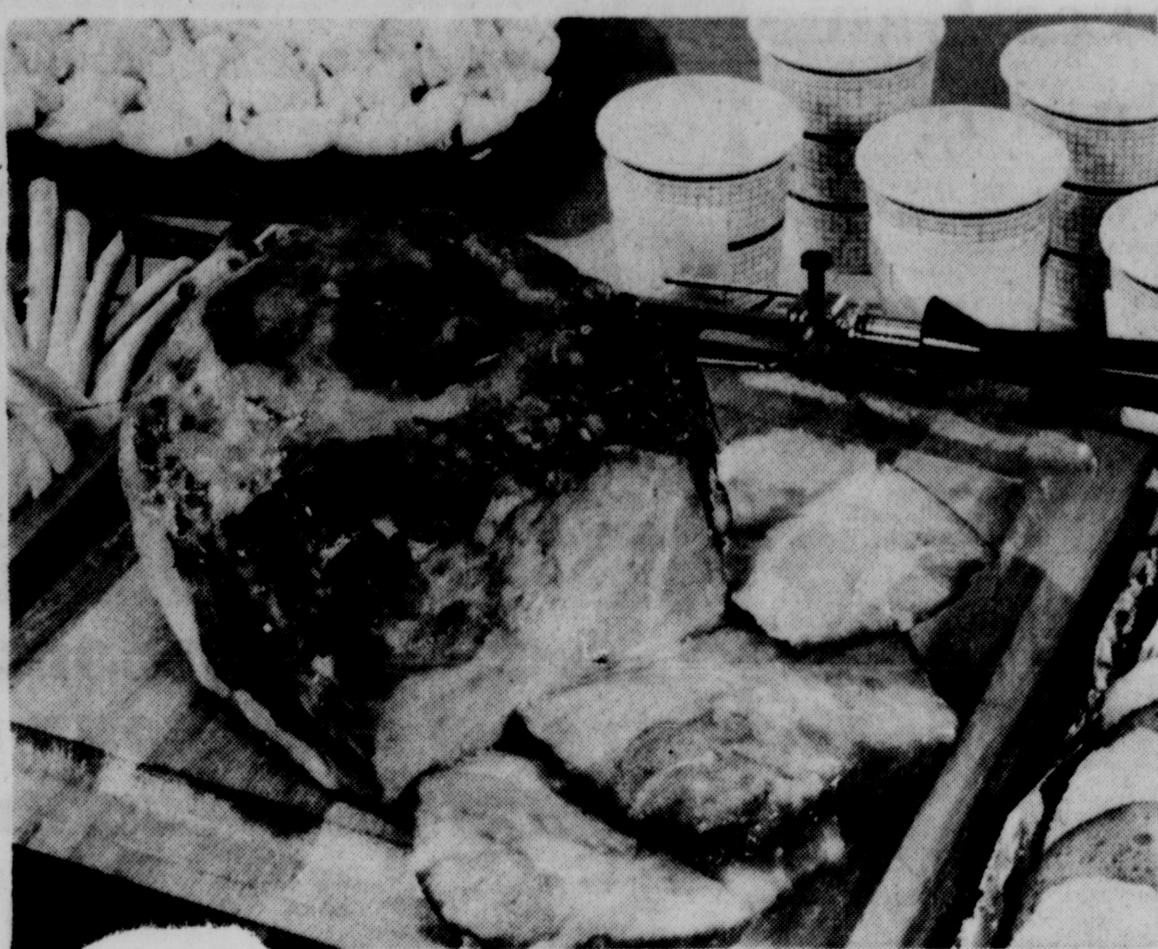

Miss Sonia Malkine of Woodstock, folk singer, has arranged performances by banjo player Billy Frazier and Ralph Santilli and Scottish balladeer Frank Fletcher.

Invitations to Goddard-Riverside's Art Program at its summer camp in Rifton were extended to many community leaders by Thomas Wolfe, executive director of Goddard-Riverside Community Center.

Gem Society

The Gem Society of Clinton Avenue Methodist Church will have a picnic at the summer home of Mrs. Peggy Van Wageningen, on Orlando Street, Esopus Creek, Kingston, Saturday, Aug. 26 at 4 p.m. Members are asked to have a covered dish and a place setting. The supper will be served at 6 p.m.

Transportation will be provided by Peggy Van Wageningen and Fay Stewart.

CANNED HAM FOR BARBECUE

Rotisserie Cooking for Labor Day

Towards Labor Day the question arises, "What else can we cook on the rotisserie outdoors?" For many the answer will be a canned ham. A five-six pound canned ham is a good size for the turning spit. Because it is boneless, the ham will yield three to four meaty servings to the pound.

The shopper should look for canned hams for the rotisserie in the refrigerated meat case at the market. Only small ham pieces weighing 1½ pounds are processed to be shelf stable. To process larger pieces to be shelf stable would overcook the meat. Therefore, canned hams with the exception of very small sizes are pasteurized and must be refrigerated at all times.

Canned hams are fully cooked during processing. Those of highest quality wear the brand name of the two most trusted words in meat. As a guide, allow 10 to 15 minutes per pound heating time. A roast meat thermometer is the best means of knowing when the ham is hot. An internal temperature of 130 degrees, indicates the ham is ready to be served.

After tying and balancing on the spit, the ham may be heated plain or rubbed with herbs or spices. Preserves or barbecue sauce can be brushed on at the last 5 minutes of heating time. The suggested time is short because foods with a tomato or sweet base have a tendency to turn dark when heated too long over charcoal or in the broiler.

Canned Ham on a Rotisserie
5 to 6 pound canned ham
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup apricot, peach or pineapple preserves
2 teaspoons lemon juice

Tie ham with string in 2 or 3 places. Insert rotisserie spit lengthwise through the center of the meat and secure with prongs. Rub spices evenly over the surface of the ham.

Insert a roast meat thermometer parallel to spit in meat. Place spit in position in a rotisserie oven or over a bed of hot coals. Heat to 130 degrees F. internal temperature allowing 10 to 15 minutes per pound.

Combine preserves and lemon juice. Spoon sweet sauce over ham during the last 5 minutes of heating period or after ham is removed from the spit.

DRUGS CAN BE DANGEROUS DURING PREGNANCY

Q. I am seven months pregnant. For the last four months I have been taking meprobamate as a tranquilizer. Tylenol for headaches and Ambar to reduce. Will any of these harm my baby? Are they habit-forming?

A—Meprobamate in the usual dosage is probably harmless. Acetaminophen (Tylenol) belongs to a group of drugs that may induce anemia in the fetus. Methamphetamine with phenobarbital (Ambar) is habit-forming and may cause excessive bleeding in newborns. During pregnancy the taking of drugs of all kinds should be kept to a minimum.

Q—Is it harmful to take penicillin during pregnancy? What effect will drinking alcohol have on the fetus?

A—Although some antibacterial agents (sulfa drugs and the tetracyclines) should be avoided during pregnancy, penicillin is considered safe. Alcohol in moderation has not been shown to have any adverse effect on the developing infant.

Q—My daughter says a strong-minded woman can prevent pregnancy by creating a mental block against it. Is this true?

A—Many women wish it were that simple but it isn't.

Q—What is the cause and treatment of myocardopathy?

A—This is a general term that means any disease of the heart muscle. It includes (1) myocarditis which may be caused by several infectious diseases but most commonly by rheumatic fever and (2) myocardial infarction due to an obstruction of one of the coronary arteries. The most important part of the early treatment in either case is rest.

Q—My doctor says I have a systolic murmur and a slightly enlarged heart. How dangerous is this?

A—The most common cause of this condition is rheumatic fever and the degree of damage may be widely varied. With skillful treatment further damage can be avoided and you can lead a nearly normal life.

Please send your questions and comments to Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D., in care of The Kingston Daily Freeman.

Hudson Valley Crusaders Slate Football Games Here

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Sports Editor

Hudson Valley Crusaders, a semi-pro football team that played at Poughkeepsie last year, launch a 10-game schedule at Dietz Stadium on Sunday, Sept. 3.

First opponent for the Poughkeepsie based squad will be the Stamford, Conn. Rattlers. All games will start at 6:30 p. m.

Player-coach Harvey Everhardt said games would be booked against the finest semi-pro teams available. Among the opponents scheduled to appear at Dietz Stadium are: New York Ravens, Brooklyn Mariners, Golden Knights, Tors Titans, Albany Bombers, Brooklyn Hawks, Long Island Jets and the Schenectady Bombers.

Everhardt, a linebacker who stands 5-7 and weighs 190

— will work with four assistant coaches in handling a 42-player squad. A graduate of Mt. St. Michaels School, Everhardt played with the New York Ravens for 16 years. He also served four years in the Air Force and was a member of the Crusaders in their first year of operation at Poughkeepsie in 1966.

Assisting Everhardt with coaching chores will be: Bob Cherry, Billy Greene, Bob Stevenson and Jim Jordan.

Stevenson, still active as a linebacker, is a 6-1, 215-pound graduate of Trumansburg High School and Cortland State College. He is a physical education instructor at Pine Plains High School and played with the Crusaders last year.

Excellent First Year

Gordon (5-11, 200) is a defensive halfback who was a three-letter standout in baseball, football and basketball at Poughkeepsie High. He also played freshman football at North Carolina University.

The Crusaders won 9 out of 10 games in their season at Riverview Field in Poughkeepsie where the average attendance was better than 1500.

Everhardt expects the team personnel to be superior to the 1966 aggregation. He has signed several new area high school players and others with college experience. At the moment there are no Kingston players working out with the Crusaders, although Fred Jackson and Ed Burns, former Kingston High stars, were members of the team last season.

The Crusaders have been working out regularly at Morse Junior High in Poughkeepsie since April of this year. The team practices three days a week, Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p. m. and Sunday mornings at 10 o'clock.

Welcome Area Players

Coach Everhardt said he would like to hear from any Kingston players who might like to try out for the team.

"If any Kingston boys are interested," said Everhardt, "we'd like to see them at our practice sessions. We'll carry between 40 and 42 players this season, but as of now everything is wide open."

The Crusaders will be Kingston's first independent football team since a series of post-war Kingston Yellow Jacket teams gave up the ghost. The original Yellow Jackets were, of course, an Eastern standout in the late 1920's and early 1930's.

Information on ticket sales location and the tentative team roster will be announced by Coach Everhardt in the next few days.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP)—In one respect, Little League baseball is the same as its major league counterpart—pitching is the name of the game.

The importance of the man in this case the boy—on the mound was never more evident than in Tuesday's opening round of the 21st annual Little League World Series.

A 12-year-old Japanese lad with a curve, fastball and control that would make some big leaguers envious, pitched a one-hit shutout for West Tokyo, Japan, over East Trail, B.C., in the first game.

Then, in the second part of a first-round doubleheader, 129-pound Mike Allen fanned seven of the first eight batters and went on to pitch one-hit ball for Newtown-Edgmont, a little community, just west of Philadelphia. He beat West Tampa (Fla.) 3-1.

West Tokyo and Newtown-Edgmont rest today, while four teams battle for the semifinal berths opposite them Thursday. Pitching again is expected to dominate. Today's opponents are the Rota U. S. Naval Station in Spain, against North Roseland of Chicago, and Llaneros, Mexico, versus Northridge, Calif.

Good Hitting Pitcher

Tuesday's games each centered around one inning. Masahiro Miyahara, who stands about five-feet two inches and patterns his pitching after Japan's all-time great hurler, Tsutomu Tanaka, not only recorded a shutout, but hammered the three-run homer in the last of the six-inning game for all his team's runs.

Newtown-Edgmont scored its runs in a 3-1 triumph over West Tampa in the third inning with the help of three walks, two wild pitches, and a pair of singles, one of the bloop variety. Allen faced one crisis when he loaded the bases with none out in the West Tampa fourth, but retired the next three batters. An interesting sidelight to the West Tokyo-East Trail game would have given the shakes to Leo Durocher, Gene Mauch, Dave Bristol, Joe Adcock, Hank Bauer and a few other more experienced major league managers. Each Japanese batter took off his hat and bowed to the umpire. If that wasn't enough, the umpire bowed back.

Bream Saves Game In Sixth Inning

Lions Club rallied with five runs in the last three innings to overcome Schovel's Tree, 5-3, and capture the 1967 City Baseball League pennant in a sudden death playoff Tuesday night at Dietz Stadium.

A record breaking crowd of 101 fans saw Ted Bream and Frank McGowan combine on a 3-hitter for the win. Bream relieved McGowan with one out and the bases loaded in the bottom of the sixth to snuff out Schovel's last threat.

The teams had tied in regular season play with 8 wins and 4 losses.

Paul (Boots) Buytkins, the sometimes inflied, outfielder, pitcher lost it for Schovel's althoigh his two-run homer sent the Tree Service winging to a 2-0 lead in the first inning.

McGowan struck out nine and Buytkins whiffed six. Drutman's single and Buytkins' homer jolted starter Ted Bream in the first inning. Schovel's added another in the third to lead 3-0 on Drutman's triple and an inflied out. That ended the Schovel Tree scoring for the night.

Score In Fifth

Pete Watzka's single after a Bream walk and McGowan single accounted for Lions' first run in the fifth. A three-run explosion followed in the sixth.

Weishaupt singled and was forced at second by Rios. Ron Valle singled and Gary Schatzel followed with a single scoring Rios. McGowan then smashed a line drive to right field. Manfro in on the smash but couldn't catch it in the dim lights and it sailed over his head for a triple scoring Schatzel and Bream sending Lions ahead 4-3.

Ted Bream came on in relief of McGowan to choke off a Schovel threat in the bottom of the sixth. Walks to Buytkins and Van Etten and Broberg's loaded the bases with one out. Bream fanned Blanchard and got Heppner to ground out to snuff out the threat.

Lions ahead 4-3.

Hudson Valley Crusaders Slate Football Games Here

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Sports Editor

Hudson Valley Crusaders, a semi-pro football team that played at Poughkeepsie last year, launch a 10-game schedule at Dietz Stadium on Sunday, Sept. 3.

First opponent for the Poughkeepsie based squad will be the Stamford, Conn. Rattlers. All games will start at 6:30 p. m.

Player-coach Harvey Everhardt said games would be booked against the finest semi-pro teams available. Among the opponents scheduled to appear at Dietz Stadium are: New York Ravens, Brooklyn Mariners, Golden Knights, Tory Titans, Albany Bombers, Brooklyn Black Hawks, Long Island Jets and the Schenectady Bombers.

Everhardt, a linebacker who stands 5-7 and weighs 190

— will work with four assistant coaches in handling a 42-player squad. A graduate of Mt. St. Michaels School, Everhardt played with the New York Ravens for 16 years. He also served four years in the Air Force and was a member of the Crusaders in their first year of operation at Poughkeepsie in 1966.

Assisting Everhardt with coaching chores will be: Bob Cherry, Billy Greene, Bob Stevenson and Jim Jordan.

Stevenson, still active as a linebacker, is a 6-1, 215-pound graduate of Trumansburg High School and Cortland State College. He is a physical education instructor at Pine Plains High School and played with the Crusaders last year.

Excellent First Year

Gordon (5-11, 200) is a defensive halfback who was a three-letter standout in baseball, football and basketball at Poughkeepsie High. He also played freshman football at North Carolina University.

The Crusaders won 9 out of 10 games in their season at Riverview Field in Poughkeepsie where the average attendance was better than 1500.

Everhardt expects the team personnel to be superior to the 1966 aggregation. He has signed several new area high school players and others with college experience. At the moment there are no Kingston players working out with the Crusaders, although Fred Jackson and Ed Burns, former Kingston High stars, were members of the team last season.

The Crusaders have been working out regularly at Morse Junior High in Poughkeepsie since April of this year. The team practices three days a week, Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p. m. and Sunday mornings at 10 o'clock.

Welcome Area Players

Coach Everhardt said he would like to hear from any Kingston players who might like to try out for the team.

"If any Kingston boys are interested," said Everhardt, "we'd like to see them at our practice sessions. We'll carry between 40 and 42 players this season, but as of now everything is wide open."

The Crusaders will be Kingston's first independent football team since a series of post-war Kingston Yellow Jacket teams gave up the ghost. The original Yellow Jackets were, of course, an Eastern standout in the late 1920's and early 1930's.

Information on ticket sales location and the tentative team roster will be announced by Coach Everhardt in the next few days.

Bream Saves Game In Sixth Inning

Lions Club rallied with five runs in the last three innings to overcome Schovel's Tree, 5-3, and capture the 1967 City Baseball League pennant in a sudden death playoff Tuesday night at Dietz Stadium.

A record breaking crowd of 101 fans saw Ted Bream and Frank McGowan combine on a 3-hitter for the win. Bream relieved McGowan with one out and the bases loaded in the bottom of the sixth to snuff out Schovel's last threat.

The teams had tied in regular season play with 8 wins and 4 losses.

Paul (Boots) Buytkins, the sometimes infielder, outfielder, pitcher lost it for Schovel's although his two-run homer sent the Tree Service winging to a 2-0 lead in the first inning.

McGowan struck out nine and Buytkins whiffed six.

Druittman's single and Buytkins' homer jolted starter Ted Bream in the first inning. Schovel's added another in the third to lead 3-0 on Druittman's triple and an infield out. That ended the Schovel Tree scoring for the night.

Score in Fifth

Pete Watzka's single after a Bream walk and McGowan single accounted for Lions' first run in the fifth. A three-run explosion followed in the sixth.

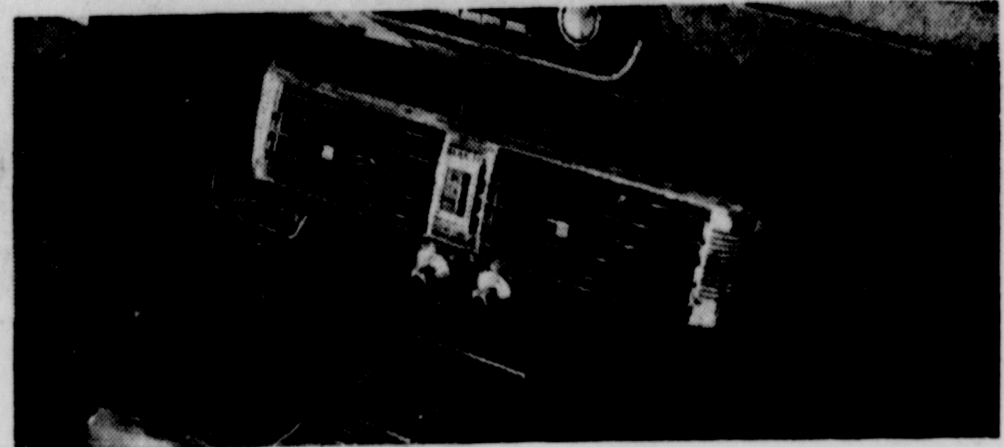

Weishaupt singled and was forced at second by Rios. Ron Valle singled and Gary Schatzel followed with a single scoring Rios. McGowan then smashed a line drive to right field. Manfro in on the smash but couldn't catch it in the dim lights and it sailed over his head for a triple scoring Schatzel and Bream sending Lions ahead 4-3.

Ted Bream came in on relief of McGowan to choke off a Schovel threat in the bottom of the sixth. Walks to Buytkins and Van Eiten and Broberg's loaded the bases with one out. Bream fanned Blanchard and got Heppner to ground out to snuff out the threat.

Area Play Continues Thursday

Rondout National Bank (American) and the Hurley Yankees won opening games of the annual area Little League round robin tournament Tuesday night.

The Rondout team scored twice in the sixth inning to come from behind and nip the Eagles of the Jaycee League, 8-7, at Forsyth Park.

A seven run first inning carried the Hurley Yankees over the Town of Ulster Yankees, 13-4, at the Hurley diamond.

The Eagles were on the front end of a 7-6 score when Rondout Bank loaded the bases in the sixth. An easy grounder to the mound, which would have ended the game, was thrown away and the tying and winning runs crossed the dish.

Jim Milano was the winner and Mike Kuehn suffered the loss.

Chris Schick led the winners with a double and two singles. Mark Anderson stroked three singles for the Eagles.

Kevin Schramm hurled a three-hitter for the Hurley Yankees. His mates picked up seven safeties and 10 walks off loser Tom Turco.

John Winchell of the losers belted a home run.

Action in the eliminations will continue on Thursday with the Kingston Americans playing the Kingston Nationals at Kingman Park and Hurley meeting Ulster at the latter's diamond.

JAYCEES CHALLENGE TROPHY: Ned Buoymaster, center, president of Ferroxcube Corp., presents challenge trophy to New York State Jaycees president Kirk Downing of Rochester at recent state convention in Long Island. Looking on is Joe Hatala, state golf chairman. The trophy went to Rochester Jaycees who sponsored the 1967 champion — Terry Diehl.

Community Backing Boosted Jaycee Bid

District II Jaycees today credited several major factors for their success in bringing an unprecedented third straight New York State Jaycees Sports Spectacular to Kingston in 1968.

Among the factors cited by area Jaycee presidents as responsible for District II's 140-102 victory over Schenectady were:

(1) The outstanding success of the last two events in Kingston; (2) preparation and an intensive bid effort by the 25 area Jaycees who attended the state convention at Stony Brook, L. I.; (3) publicity and (4) local support.

The crucial and deciding factor, however, proved to be the overwhelming backing and interest of the local business community, as evidenced by pledges to date of more than $2,000, and individual commitments of both facilities and personal efforts from many interested people in the community.

Publicity from area news media, and particularly the Kingston Daily Freeman, proved most impressive to the convention delegates. Copies of sports pages and editorials were distributed throughout the convention. The local Jaycees believe this contributed greatly to their success.

Leading the District II Jaycees in their successful bid was district president John Spratt of Woodstock. National director Frank Antalek of Saugerties offered invaluable assistance in the victory. Local chapter delegations were led by presidents Pat Jordan of Kingston, Larry Sasser of Saugerties and Paul DeLisio of Woodstock.

A preliminary check on delegate strength the first night of the convention revealed that District II was a decided underdog. Last minute presentations and an all-night effort to reach uncommitted delegates proved to be the margin of victory. Promise of an even finer event next year was also convincing.

At the Saturday banquet where Bill Moyers, former presidential press secretary spoke the Ferroxcube Corp. of Saugerties presented a silver challenge trophy to the State Jaycees for the junior golf portion of the Sports Spectacular.

The trophy was given to the Rochester Jaycees who sponsored this year's golf champion, Terry Diehl. Challenge trophies have been promised for the other two events—tennis and track and field—for the 1968 Spectacular.

JAYCEES CHALLENGE TROPHY: Ned Buoymaster, center, president of Ferroxcube Corp., presents challenge trophy to New York State Jaycees president Kirk Downing of Rochester at recent state convention in Long Island. Looking on is Joe Hatala, state golf chairman. The trophy went to Rochester Jaycees who sponsored the 1967 championship — Terry Diehl.

Community Backing Boosted Jaycee Bid

District II Jaycees today credited several major factors for their success in bringing an unprecedented third straight New York State Jaycees Sports Spectacular to Kingston in 1968.

Among the factors cited by area Jaycee presidents as responsible for District II's 140-102 victory over Schenectady were:

(1) The outstanding success of the last two events in Kingston; (2) preparation and an intensive bid effort by the 25 area Jaycees who attended the state convention at Stonybrook, L. I.; (3) publicity and (4) local support.

The crucial and deciding factor, however, proved to be the overwhelming backing and interest of the local business community, as evidenced by pledges to date of more than $2,000, and individual commitments of both facilities and personal efforts from many interested people in the community.

Publicity from area news media, and particularly the Kingston Daily Freeman, proved most impressive to the convention delegates. Copies of sports pages and editorials were distributed throughout the convention. The local Jaycees believe this contributed greatly to their success.

Leading the District II Jaycees in their successful bid was

district president John Spratt of Woodstock. National director Frank Antalek of Saugerties offered invaluable assistance in the victory. Local chapter delegations were led by presidents Pat Jordan of Kingston, Larry Sasser of Saugerties and Paul DeLisio of Woodstock.

A preliminary check on delegate strength the first night of the convention revealed that District II was a decided underdog. Last minute presentations and an all-night effort to reach uncommitted delegates proved to be the margin of victory. Promise of an even finer event next year was also convincing.

At the Saturday banquet where Bill Moyers, former presidential press secretary, spoke the Ferroxcube Corp. of Saugerties presented a silver challenge trophy to the State Jaycees for the junior golf portion of the Sports Spectacular. The trophy was given to the Rochester Jaycees who sponsored this year's golf champion, Terry Diehl. Challenge trophies have been promised for the other two events—tennis and track and field—for the 1968 Spectacular.

Michael's, Vikings Gain Softball Edge

The second game of their best-of-three Yankee division finals scheduled today in the Saugerties Softball League.

In action Tuesday, Southside Men's Club edged Anton's Restaurant, 8-6, in the Yankee Division, while Nationwide Insurance nipped McConkey's Funeral Home, 15-14, in a Met Division slugfest.

Michael's Barber Shop, leading 1-0, plays Ferroxcube in seventh after McConkey's had forged ahead 14-13. Raucel, who had homered and tripled earlier, had three RBIs.

Michael's Barber Shop backed Mouse Wolven's 2-hit pitching with four home runs in a 12-0 rout of Ferroxcube in the opener of their best-of-three championship playoff. Joe Benjamin hit two homers for the third time this season, with Buster Buel and Mickey Lannone getting the others.

Paul Krusher belted two homers and knocked in five runs to pace Vikings to a 17-9 rout of Miller's Rexall in their opener.

Cole Porter's 'Kiss Me Kate' Is Revived

By DOROTHY A. NAREL

Filled with all the old chestnuts "Another Op'nin', Another Show," "Why Can't You Behave," and "Wonderbar," the production, while ragged in spots, is an acceptable one. Director Harold Baldridge, who almost produced a miracle in two weeks time, expects to tighten the show during today's three hour rehearsal.

The romantic leads went to Del Hinkley and Tanny McDonald who leave favorable impressions. Both are talented up-coming performers and have very pleasant voices. But the scene stealers are William Metz and William B. Ade, cast as two hoods. They stop the show with "Brush Up Your Shakespeare."

You can spot a good deal of talent on stage during this last production of the summer season. Ronda Copland, as Bianca, is a sufficiently sexy performer and her number "Always True to Your Darlin' in My Fashion."

Of course, Will Roy, the operatic bass-baritone, dominates the stage when he appears. His well trained voice is marvelous to hear even in chorus with others. His stage presence is excellent. Ed Penn does well in this production as do Robert Mumford, Leslie Rivers, Vernon Washington, Fred Miller and Bill Collins.

One who doesn't get appropriate billing in the program but who shows tremendous promise of a future in the business is Paul Brno featured in the number "Too Darn Hot." Watch for him.

Rounding out the cast are Cliff Lipson, Howard Griven, Diane Hall, Sylvia Hummel, Mary Petersham, Amy Lieberman, John Claussen, Melissa Barian, Melanie Chartoff, Tom Collins, Doug Condit, David Erde and Hank Hippie.

"Kiss Me Kate" continues on stage through September 4.

Screen: 'Ulysses' in Kingston

The motion picture of James Joyce's "Ulysses," the most important and controversial novel of the 20th Century, will play exclusively in Kingston at the Sunset Drive-In Theatre starting tonight for one week. This will be the first drive-in showing in the United States and also the first time at regular prices.

MILO O'SHEA

Joyce's novel "Ulysses" was published in 1918 but was not allowed in this country until 1933 when Justice John M. Woolsey of the U.S. District Court declared: "...in 'Ulysses,' in spite of its unusual frankness, I do not detect anywhere the leer of the sensualist. I hold, therefore, that it is not pornographic." The novel was published here shortly thereafter.

For the next 30 years, the motion picture industry struggled to find a way to bring the book to the screen. Several film giants, Eisenstein and Jerry Wald, among them, failed to develop a screenplay that was both faithful to the author's concept and within the bounds of contemporary good taste, and therefore, cancelled the project.

Finally, in 1962, director Joseph Strick obtained the rights to the novel. Strick, whose previous films include Jean Genet's "The Balcony," another "impossible" project by Hollywood standards, immediately began work with producer Walter Reade Jr., on the project. Strick wrote the screenplay with Fred Haines and started filming in July, 1966 in Dublin on the actual locations described by Joyce.

Executive producer Reade, who is also distributing the film, describes "Ulysses" as "a motion picture that is more personal, more explicit and more adult than anything ever presented in a motion picture theatre. Joseph Strick and I decided at the beginning that we would make no compromises. We have aimed at a faithful and artistic translation of this great novel to the screen."

"Ulysses," which was filmed in Panavision, stars Barbara Jefford, England's leading Shakespearean actress; Milo O'Shea, Ireland's most popular actor; and Maurice Rooves of Sir Laurence Olivier's National Repertory Company.

Onteora Summer Chorus Schedules Annual Concert Here

The Onteora Summer Chorus will present Ilse Sass, concert pianist, as guest artist for its 15th annual concert on Wednesday, Aug. 30 at 8:15 p. m. in the J. Watson Bailey School, Kingston.

Born in Germany and graduated from Cologne Conservatory, Miss Sass has appeared in numerous chamber music recitals and was hailed as a "sensitive pianist whose playing is marked by taste and refinement."

The chorus will be directed by Percy W. Gazlay, 2nd, who is also minister of music at the Fair Street Reformed Church of Kingston. This is Mr. Gazlay's eighth year as director of the summer chorus.

The chorus is scheduled to sing the following selections:

"Wach Auf Chorale from Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg; "Joy" by Charles Cadman, arranged by Wallingford Riegger; "Olaf Trygvason," by Edvard Grieg; "Comin' Round the Mountain," by James A. Riddle; "Will You Remember," from May Time by Romberg; "It's A Big Wide Wonderful World," by John Rox; "Waters Ripple and Flow," by Deems Taylor; "De Animals a-Comin'," a Negro spiritual; "Be Not Afraid," from Mendelssohn's "Elijah"; "The Landing of the Pilgrims," by Charles L. Talmadge; "Elijah Rock," traditional spiritual by Jester Hairston; "Lacrymosa," from Mozart's Requiem; and "Opening Chorus of the Villagers" from the Bartered Bride.

Tickets are now available from members of the chorus and at the door the night of the performance.

Minnewaska Concerts End This Weekend

A gala weekend of concerts on Aug. 25, 26, and 27 will mark the close of the first season of the Minnewaska Concert Series in the big blue and white striped concert tent at Ski Minne, off Route 44 near New Paltz.

The eight week concert series, presented by the new, non-profit Mid-Atlantic Music Center, will conclude its first summer season with a festival array of chamber music ensembles of trios, quartets, and quintets; symphonic programs; and concert band and choral works.

The festivities will begin Friday night, Aug. 25, at 8 p. m. with a chamber music concert which will feature a cello trio as well as the Curtis String Quartet and the Ithaca Woodwind Quintet.

On Saturday night, Aug. 26, at 8 p. m., Maestro Louis Vynner will conduct the 90-member Minnewaska Symphony Orchestra in a concert which will be highlighted by the world premiere of a piano concerto by Dr. Mary Bainbridge Vynner, played by the composer.

The complete program for Saturday night, Aug. 26, will be:

Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach-Vyner; Symphony No. 7 in A major, Op. 92, Beethoven; Piano Concerto in F major, Mary Bainbridge Vynner; Mary Bainbridge Vynner, piano soloist; Emperor Waltz, Johann Strauss.

A Grand Finale Concert will be presented on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 27, at 2 p. m., one hour earlier during which Louis Vynner will conduct the 90-member Minnewaska Symphony Orchestra; Edward Gobrecht will conduct the 60-member Minnewaska Concert Band while Pierce A. Getz will direct the 5-voice Minnewaska Chorus.

About the Soloist

For the premiere performance of "Piano Concerto in F major" by Mary Bainbridge Vynner, with the composer as piano soloist on Saturday, the 90-member Minnewaska Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by the composer's husband, Louis Vynner.

Dr. Mary Vynner is the recipient of many music prizes both as a pianist and composer, including three first prizes from the National Federation of Music Clubs and the National Composition Award.

She is a member of the piano faculty of the Philadelphia Music Academy as well as director of the Lancaster (Pa.) Conservatory of Music where she is also a chairman of the piano department.

At the age of 12, Mary Bainbridge auditioned for and was accepted by the Carnegie Institute of Technology. Not graduating from high school until she was 13, she therefore attended Carnegie Tech and high school simultaneously for a year. She was awarded her bachelor of music degree at the age of 17 and her master's at 19 by which time she had appeared in four solo recitals at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Hall. When she was 20, she made her debut in New York's Carnegie Hall.

Maestro Vynner and Dr. Vynner met eight years ago when he was auditioning pianists to perform with his Lancaster Symphony. Dr. Vynner arranged an audition for several of her piano students. The Maestro, however, selected the teacher rather than any of the students, to be the soloist with the orchestra. Soon, he also selected her to be his wife. This dynamic duo will be performing together for the first time during the Minnewaska Concert Series when he conducts her piano concerto on Saturday night.

By DOROTHY A. NAREL

Cole Porter's "Kiss Me Kate," one of the most delightful song fests ever to hit Broadway, was dusted off and presented by Woodstock Playhouse last night.

Filled with all the old chestnuts "Another Op'nin', Another Show," "Why Can't You Behave," and "Wunderbar," the production, while ragged in spots, is an acceptable one.

Director Harold Baldrige, who almost produced a miracle in two weeks time, expects to tighten the show during today's three hour rehearsal.

The romantic leads went to Del Hinkley and Tanny McDonald who leave favorable impressions. Both are talented up-coming performers. But have very pleasant voices. And the scene-stealers are William Metz and William B. Ade, cast as two hoods. They stop the show with "Brush Up Your Shakespeare."

Of course, Will Roy, the operatic bass-baritone, dominates the stage when he appears. His well trained voice is marvelous to hear even in chorus with others. His stage presence is excellent. Ed Penn does well in this production as do Robert Mumford, Leslie Rivers, Vernon Washington, Fred Miller and Bill Collins.

One who doesn't get appropriate billing in the program but who shows tremendous promise of a future in the business is Paul Brno featured in the number "Too Darn Hot." Watch for him.

Rounding out the cast are Cliff Lipson, Howard Givens, Diane Hall, Sylvia Hummel, Mary Petersham, Amy Lieberman, John Clausen, Melissa Barian, Melanie Chartoff, Tom Collins, Doug Condit, David Erde and Hank Hippie.

"Kiss Me Kate" continues on stage through September 4.

Dutchess Sailor, Girl Killed in Va.

A motorcycle accident in Chesapeake, Va., claimed the life of a Dutchess County Navy man and his companion Friday.

Seaman David Joseph Eddy, 20, of Staatsburg, and his passenger, Miss JoAnne Barnes of Portsmouth, Va., were killed when the motorcycle they were riding collided with a car according to the Associated Press.

Eddy's funeral service is being held today at Sweet's Funeral Home, Hyde Park.

Screen: 'Ulysses' in Kingston

The motion picture of James Joyce's "Ulysses," the most important and controversial novel of the 20th Century, will play exclusively in Kingston at the Sunset Drive-In Theatre starting tonight for one week.

This will be the first drive-in showing in the United States and also the first time at regular prices.

Joyce's novel "Ulysses" was published in 1918 but was not allowed in this country until 1933 when Justice John M. Woolsey of the U.S. District Court declared: "... in 'Ulysses,' in spite of its unusual frankness, I do not detect anywhere the leer of the sensualist. I hold, therefore, that it is not pornographic."

The novel was published here shortly thereafter. For the next 30 years, the motion picture industry struggled to find a way to bring the book to the screen. Several film giants, Eisenstein and Jerry Wald, among them, failed to develop a screenplay that was both faithful to the author's concept and within the bounds of contemporary good taste, and therefore, cancelled the project.

Finally, in 1962, director Joseph Strick obtained the rights to the novel. Strick, whose previous films include Jean Genet's "The Balcony," another "impossible" project by Hollywood standards, immediately began work with producer Walter Reade Jr. on the project. Strick wrote the screenplay with Fred Haines and started filming in July, 1966 in Dublin on the actual locations described by Joyce.

Executive producer Reade, who is also distributing the film, describes "Ulysses" as "a motion picture that is more personal, more explicit and more adult than anything ever presented in a motion picture theatre. Joseph Strick and I decided at the beginning that we would make no compromises. We have aimed at a faithful and artistic translation of this great novel to the screen."

"Ulysses," which was filmed in Panavision, stars Barbara Jefford, England's leading Shakespearean actress; Milo O'Shea, Ireland's most popular actor; and Maurice Roeves of Sir Laurence Olivier's National Repertory Company.

Onteora Summer Chorus Schedules Annual Concert Here

The Onteora Summer Chorus will present Ilse Sass, concert pianist, as guest artist for its 15th annual concert on Wednesday, Aug. 30 at 8:15 p. m. in the J. Watson Bailey School, Kingston.

Born in Germany and graduated from Cologne Conservatory, Miss Sass has appeared in numerous chamber music recitals and was hailed as a "sensitive pianist whose playing is marked by taste and refinement" by a New York Times critic.

The chorus will be directed by Percy W. Gazlay, 2nd, who is also minister of music at the Fair Street Reformed Church of Kingston. This is Mr. Gazlay's eighth year as director of the summer chorus.

The chorus is scheduled to sing the following selections:

"Wach Auf Chorale von Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg;" "Joy" by Charles Cadman, arranged by Wallingford Riegger; "Olaf Trygvason," by Edward Grief; "Comin' Round the Mountain," by James A. Riddell; "Will You Remember," from May Time by Romberg; "It's A Big Wide Wonderful World," by John Rox; "Waters Ripple and Flow," by Deems Taylor; "De Animals a-Comin'," a Negro spiritual; "Be Not Afraid," from Mendelssohn's "Elijah;" "The Landing of the Pilgrims," by Charles L. Talmadge; "Elijah Rock," traditional spiritual by Jester Hairston; "Lacrymosa," from Mozart's Requiem; and "Opening Chorus of the Villagers" from the Bartered Bride.

Tickets are now available from members of the chorus and at the door the night of the performance.

ILSE SASS, CONCERT PIANIST

Minnewaska Concerts End This Weekend

A gala weekend of concerts on Aug. 25, 26, and 27 will mark the close of the first season of the Minnewaska Concert Series in the big blue and white striped concert tent at Ski Minne, off Route 44 near New Paltz.

The eight week concert series, presented by the new, non-profit Mid-Atlantic Music Center, will conclude its first summer season with a festival array of chamber music ensembles of trios, quartets, and quintets; symphonic programs; and concert band and choral works.

The festivities will begin Friday night, Aug. 25, at 8 p. m. with a chamber music concert, played by the composer.

On Saturday night, Aug. 26, at 8 p. m., Maestro Louis Vyrer will conduct the 90-member Minnewaska Symphony Orchestra in a concert which will be highlighted by the world premiere of a piano concerto by Dr. Mary Bainbridge Vyrer.

The complete program for Saturday night, Aug. 26, will be: Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach-Vyrer; Symphony No. 7 in A major, Op. 92, Beethoven; Piano Concerto in F major, Mary Bainbridge Vyrer, Mary Bainbridge Vyrer, piano soloist; Emperor Waltz, Johann Strauss.

A Grand Finale Concert will be presented on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 27, at 2 p. m., one hour earlier during which Louis Vyrer will conduct the 90-member Minnewaska Symphony Orchestra; Edward Gobrecht will conduct the 60-member Minnewaska Concert Band while Pierce A. Getz will direct the 5-voice Minnewaska Chorus.

About the Soloist For the premiere performance of "Piano Concerto in F major" by Mary Bainbridge Vyrer, with the composer as piano soloist on Saturday, the 90-member Minnewaska Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by the composer's husband, Louis Vyrer.

Dr. Mary Bainbridge Vyrer composed the piano concerto when she was 16. She has withheld it from performance until now after revising it this summer while an artist-in-residence at the Mid Atlantic Music Camp which sponsors the Minnewaska Concert Series.

The concerto begins in traditional style, but Dr. Vyrer has now woven into the second movement a lullaby which Maestro Vyrer's mother sang to him as a child. The third movement differs rhythmically from the two preceding ones, changing the 5-4 metre.

Dr. Mary Vyrer is the recipient of many music prizes both as a pianist and composer, including three first prizes from the National Federation of Music Clubs and the National Composition Award.

She is a member of the piano faculty of the Philadelphia Music Academy as well as director of the Lancaster (Pa.) Conservatory of Music where she is also a chairman of the piano department.

At the age of 12, Mary Bainbridge auditioned for and was accepted by the Carnegie Institute of Technology. Not graduating from high school until she was 13, she therefore attended Carnegie Tech and high school simultaneously for a year. She was awarded her bachelor of music degree at the age of 17 and her master's at 19 by which time she had appeared in four solo recitals at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Hall. When she was 20, she made her debut in New York's Carnegie Hall.

Maestro Vyrer and Dr. Vyrer met eight years ago when he was auditioning pianists to perform with his Lancaster Symphony. Dr. Vyrer arranged an audition for several of her piano students. The Maestro, however, selected the teacher rather than any of the students, to be the soloist with the orchestra. Soon, he also selected her to be his wife. This dynamic duo will be performing together for the first time during the Minnewaska Concert Series when he conducts her piano concerto on Saturday night.

Dear Abby

Tries to Avoid Honeymoon

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: On the first day of our honeymoon, my husband (let's call him Alex) fell asleep on the beach and got sunburned so severely he had to have a doctor. His eyelids were swollen shut, so he couldn't watch television or read. So I spent the whole two weeks of our so-called honeymoon holding his hand.

The day Alex was well enough to go to work his boss asked him to go on a two-week business trip, without me. I asked him to explain the circumstances to his boss, but he wouldn't, so I stayed at my mother's while he was gone. Alex got back on a Sunday morning. That afternoon we went on a picnic and he got poison oak over seven-eighths of his body. The doctor said he never saw such a bad case. When Alex recovered from the poison oak he was fixing his car, the jack slipped and the car fell on him and broke both his legs. So now he is in casts up to his hips. What I am trying to say, Dear Abby, is that I have been married since June and I still haven't had a honeymoon, so what should I do?

any of my neighbors — except maybe for the noise she might make. There ought to be a law preventing people like her from having pets.

G. B.

DISGUSTED: It would appear that your husband has been either consciously or unconsciously avoiding the honeymoon since the day he said "I do." If something else happens to delay the honeymoon further, you may have to ask Alex to face the music and settle down to some serious soul searching involving himself and these unfortunate accidents.

DEAR ABBY: I just read that letter from the lady who said she has a pet tiger which she plans to have defanged, declawed, and keep in a cage so as not to disturb her neighbors.

Well, I don't want any pet tigers, but I would sure like to get my hands on that lady. I will promise to pull all her teeth out. Then I will pull all her fingernails and toenails off. And I'll keep her in a small cage. I'm sure she won't bother

DEAR ABBY: A member of our card club always asks the hostess if she may take a few refreshments home to her husband. Then she collects a few cookies, candies and whatever else she can carry off in a paper napkin.

We all think this is in very poor taste, but we don't know how to put a stop to it. They are in the same financial bracket as the rest of us and outside of this one cheap little trick, she is a lovely person. What do you suggest?

DEAR ABBY: I certainly would not offend a lovely person by denying her a few cookies, candies or whatever can be carried off in a paper napkin.

East Disregards West's Signal

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
 West's five club bid was one of those old fashioned wing and a prayer calls. He didn't have any idea who could make how much but he did not want to be shut out.

Actually West could get out for one down at five clubs but he didn't get to play the hand there because North went to five spades.

East won the first trick with his ace of clubs and shifted to the king of hearts. South dropped the three and West played the four. He did not want a heart continuation if East had started with four hearts.

This left East with a real problem. If South had made the mistake of false-carding with the nine East would have known that he could continue hearts with safety. The three would be missing and East would know that his partner's four spot play was the start of an echo with 4-3 doubleton or that South had false-carded. Either way East would feel certain that he could collect a second heart trick.

However, South had played the three and East had a problem. East was a slow player and took plenty of time. Eventually he led his ace of hearts and South was down one. East's reasoning was that South had held at least seven spades and therefore could not have more than five red cards. One of those red cards was sure to be the king or queen of diamonds. If West held both king and queen he would probably have opened the suit instead of clubs. Irrespective of which diamond honor South held he would be able to finesse against West and discard any hearts he held on dummy's long diamonds. Therefore if South did not hold another heart he would make the hand in any event.

The Return of Desi---No. 1

EDITORS: This is the first of two columns on the return of Desi Arnaz to television.

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer DEL MAR, Calif. (AP)—Desi Arnaz, in the period following his divorce from Lucille Ball, sold his stock in Desilu, quit show business and retired to his horse farm, his boat, track and golf course. He stood it for three years, but now he's back with both feet—and seems a little surprised.

"Things that got me where I was were the things I couldn't do when I got there," said the man who built a camera technique and a comedy series into a giant production company, Desilu, and a fortune. Arnaz, now in his early fifties, has picked up some weight and his hair shows considerably more salt than pepper. After three years in retirement and two developing new shows he was lured back into television as producer and director of NBC's new comedy series, "The Mothers-in-Law," and has even been persuaded to act in one of the episodes.

Almost Lost Life

After directing the first eight episodes, he is sidelined at his beach home at this Pacific Ocean resort recuperating from a freak accident which almost took his life. A veranda on which he was sitting collapsed and threw him against a metal stake, puncturing his side and requiring emergency surgery.

"I got where I didn't want to be because things began paralyzing," said Arnaz, lighting a slim cigar and quinting at the ocean through dark glasses.

"We had a little studio and 'I Love Lucy' and then to compete we had to get a larger studio and from there on we had to get out or get bigger. We wound up with three big studios. But by 1962 I decided I didn't want to be Lew Wasserman head of Universal Studios. I wanted to be Willie Wyler, a top film director."

But for three years, Desi was neither. But his attention inevitably was caught by a book which he thought would make a good movie. Soon William Paley, chairman of the Columbia Broadcasting System, called him. Arnaz said and asked if he really intended to return to work-outside television.

No More Rat Race

"No more rat race," Desi told him. "No more wanting things day before yesterday."

"It takes three years to get even in television while losing $5,000 or $10,000 a year," he explained. "I was even then and I didn't know anything about comedy shows with gimmicks where the people take pills or live in bottles... Comedy is where you pile one joke on top of another joke and people laugh."

But the result was that Desi Arnaz returned to television, signed by CBS, his old network, to develop shows. And the first venture was based on an idea that had been kicking around Desilu since "I Love Lucy" days.

He first managed to get back Bob Carroll Jr. and Madelyn Davis who had written all 180 original Lucy shows. Eve Arden was added

A veranda on which he was sitting collapsed and threw him against a metal stake, puncturing his side and requiring emergency surgery.

Office Cat

A spendthrift young lady went into a bank and announced that she would like to open a joint bank account. Teller—With whom? Young Lady—That's a silly question. With someone who has money, naturally!

Folks are very seldom what they say they are.

Four business associates were winding up their meeting with plans for a duten treat. As they started out the door, one man gasped and grabbed the phone. He hurriedly dialed his wife—"Hon, you remember this morning when you gave me my lunch money, well—I left in my apron pocket...."

Wisdom is knowing when to speak your mind and when to mind your speech.

"I got where I didn't want to be because things began parlaying," said Arnaz, lighting a slim cigar and squinting at the ocean through dark glasses. "We had a little studio and I Love Lucy" and then to compete we had to get a larger studio and from there on we had to get out or get bigger. We wound up with three big studios. And the first venture was based on an idea that had been kicking around Desilu since "I Love Lucy" days. He first managed to get back Bob Carroll Jr. and Madelyn Davis who had written all 180 original Lucy shows. Eve Arden was added as the star comedienne, and although not Desi's first choice, Kaye Ballard joined her when Arnaz saw her performing in a night club.

The show was called "The Mothers-in-Law." Then CBS and a rich, important sponsor interested him in finding a situation comedy for Carol Channing. Everything seemed to be going swimmingly.

He planned to use the three-camera, live-on-film technique, made before a studio audience, which he developed for "I Love Lucy."

But then the come-back of Desi Arnaz took an unexpected turn. First "The Carol Channing Show" was dropped — then CBS turned thumbs down on "The Mothers-in-Law."

City Marine Awarded Bronze Star in Viet

A Kingston Marine, Sgt. Edward Fischer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Fischer of 22 Mary's Avenue, has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal with Combat Distinguishing Device for gallantry in action in Vietnam April 21.

Sgt. Fischer was also awarded the Purple Heart as he was severely wounded during the mortar attack in which he won the nation's third highest award for bravery in combat.

The citation accompanying the Bronze Star reads: "For heroic achievement in connection with operations against insurgent communist (Viet Cong) forces in the Republic of Vietnam while serving as a Tank Commander with Company A, Third Tank Battalion, Third Marine Division. On 21 April 1967, Sergeant Fischer's tank platoon was assigned the mission of providing security for an artillery position near Gio Linh in Quang Tri Province. During the evening the area came under an intense enemy mortar and rocket attack. In the barrage of enemy fire an ammunition bunker near his tank received a direct hit and immediately burst into flames. "Reacting instantly, Sgt. Fischer seized a fire extinguisher from his tank and unhesitatingly moved to the bunker in a valiant attempt to extinguish the flames. Braving the intense heat and exploding ammunition in the burning bunker, and despite the heavy enemy fire, Sgt. Fischer fearlessly maintained his position until an explosion knocked him into an adjacent trench, seriously wounding him. Inspired by his courageous actions, other Marines continued to fight the blazing bunker until the fire was extinguished. "Sgt. Fischer's bold initiative, courageous actions and selfless devotion to duty at great personal risk were in keeping with the highest traditions of the Marine Corps and of the United States Naval Service," the citation concluded.

Negro Fugitive Backs Violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — A publication of a fugitive American Negro in Red China which advocates violence in U.S. cities and advises Negro GIs to "eliminate" their white comrades in Vietnam has been carried in the U.S. mails.

The 12-page folder, stating it is published in Peking by Robert F. Williams, contains in the latest edition available here tips for logging sewer lines and highways, burning public facilities and smashing windows without getting caught.

It also urges that American Negroes refuse to fight in Vietnam. But it says those who are "trapped into" serving should "throw a monkey wrench into those murderous operations."

Further, it says: "They should eliminate as many of their real enemies as they can at the front so that these racists will not be able to return home and intensify the brutalization and extermination of black people to the extent that they are currently exterminating the Vietnamese people."

Postal, Customs and Justice Department officials say their power to police the import of foreign propaganda has been sharply restricted in recent years by Supreme court decisions dealing with the First Amendment's guarantees of freedom of speech and press. A customs spokesman said propaganda is barred at the ports of entry only if it is treasonable or advocates overthrow of the government or assassination of the President.

Because of the legal restrictions, the officials said, they were unable to determine the extent of the circulation of Crusader which Williams has turned out on an irregular basis since he fled, first to Cuba and then to Red China.

"I don't think there is anyone in the government who keeps a record on it," said one official. However, another official said "a hell of a lot of them come in." A Detroit detective acknowledged he had no trouble purchasing copies of the Crusader at a bookstore specializing in militant publications in the heart of the area torn by rioting last month.

A Negro newsman in Detroit said he didn't think the circulation was extensive. He said he received his copy in the mail although he never subscribed to it.

Williams, one of the first of the Negro militants, fled to Cuba six years ago to dodge a charge of kidnapping during a racial disturbance in Monroe, N. C.

In Havana, the bearded, 42-year-old Negro became a propagandist. He is said to have forged Fidel Castro's link with U. S. Negro militants with the violence-prone Revolutionary Action Movement RAM. Some officers of the secretive RAM organization were arrested in New York in June and charged with a plot to assassinate moderate civil rights leaders. The House Committee on Un-American Activities has accused RAM of planning to start a riot in Chicago two years ago.

There has been widespread speculation this summer's epidemic of Negro violence was encouraged by Havana and Peking.

But officials with access to domestic and foreign intelligence information say they have absolutely no evidence of any underground financial channel from Communist capitals to Negro slums.

Nine Vacancies

Exam Oct. 21 for Village Police

With nine vacancies existing for police patrolmen in three villages of Ulster County, the Ulster County Civil Service Commission has called an open competitive examination for Oct. 21. The last date for filing applications is Sept. 15. Information and application blanks may be obtained from the Ulster County Civil Service Commission, UPO Box 172, County Office Building, Kingston.

Presently there are four police vacancies in Ellenville where the starting salary is $4,700. In New Paltz, there are two vacancies with a starting salary of $4,800. Three vacancies exist in Saugerties where the salary is $5,100 for starting period.

The eligible list established from the October examination will be used to fill police patrolmen vacancies as they occur in all Ulster County villages provided the eligible meets the minimum requirements for these positions.

Among minimum requirements are that candidates must have been legal residents of Ulster, Dutchess, Orange, Sullivan, Delaware, Greene or Columbia County for at least four months immediately prior to the date of the written examination.

Candidates must not be less than 21 years of age and must not have reached their 29th birthday by date of written test. Candidates who lack one month or less of minimum age are eligible. Applicants must be a graduate from a standard senior high school or possess a New York State high school equivalency diploma. Applicants who do not possess a high school diploma are eligible for examination.

Negro Fugitive Backs Violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — A publication of a fugitive American Negro in Red China which advocates violence in U.S. cities and advises Negro GIs to "eliminate" their white comrades in Vietnam has been carried in the U.S. mails.

The 12-page folder, stating it is published in Peking by Robert F. Williams, contains in the latest edition available here tips for logging sewer lines and highways, burning public facilities and smashing windows without getting caught.

It also urges that American Negroes refuse to fight in Vietnam. But it says those who are "trapped into" serving should "throw a monkey wrench into those murderous operations."

Further, it says: "They should eliminate as many of their real enemies as they can at the front so that these racists will not be able to return home and intensify the brutalization and extermination of black people to the extent that they are currently exterminating the Vietnamese people."

Postal, Customs and Justice Department officials say their power to police the import of foreign propaganda has been sharply restricted in recent years by Supreme court decisions dealing with the First Amendment's guarantees of freedom of speech and press.

A customs spokesman said propaganda is barred at the ports of entry only if it is treasonable or advocates overthrow of the government or assassination of the President.

Because of the legal restrictions, the officials said, they were unable to determine the extent of the circulation of Crusader which Williams has turned out on an irregular basis since he fled, first to Cuba and then to Red China.

"I don't think there is anyone in the government who keeps a record on it," said one official. However, another official said "a hell of a lot of them come in." A Detroit detective acknowledged he had no trouble purchasing copies of the Crusader at a bookstore specializing in militant publications in the heart of the area torn by rioting last month.

A Negro newspaper in Detroit said he didn't think the circulation was extensive. He said he received his copy in the mail although he never subscribed to it.

Williams, one of the first of the Negro militants, fled to Cuba six years ago to dodge a charge of kidnapping during a racial disturbance in Monroe, N. C.

In Havana, the bearded, 42-year-old Negro became a propagandist. He is said to have forged Fidel Castro's link with U. S. Negro militants and founded the violence-prone Revolutionary Action Movement (RAM). Some officers of the secretive RAM organization were arrested in New York in June and charged with a plot to assassinate moderate civil rights leaders. The House Committee on Un-American Activities has accused RAM of planning to start a riot in Chicago two years ago.

There has been widespread speculation this summer's epidemic of Negro violence was encouraged by Havana and Peking.
